By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1926, by The Star Company)

AT THE LAYING of the Press Club cornerstone in Washington, President Coolidge said:

"We have clearly declared our injunction to refrain from interfering in the political affairs of others by refusing to adhere to the League of Nations."

This is the best thing that has been said about United States international policy since Washington advised the nation to mind its business and let Europe mind hers.

THE PRESIDENT has not forgotten the gigantic plurality, based on opposition to the League of Nations, that elected him in 1924.

If our entering the World Court had been submitted to the people in 1924, they would have voted against that as they did on the League of Nations.

What the people think of the World Court, a back door to the League, will be shown presently in Illinois. Mr. McKinley, who desires to return to the Senate, is an estimable citizen. But his record includes indorsement of the plan to put this country in the World Court, where our one judge, against ten, would be hopelessly outvoted in an atmosphere of hatred.

SENATOR McKINLEY will learn in Illinois, and President Coolidge will learn through Senator McKinley, how the World Court stands in public estimation.

CRIME LAID TO CANADIAN DRY LAW

BOOTLEG IN HUB FRATS, IS CLAIM

Washington, April 10.—Canada's experiments with prohibition were drawn upon today for evidence to support the wet cause before the Senate liquor committee.

Rounding out a week of hearings and with several days to go before exhausting the time allotted them, the wet leaders gave over most of today's session to questioning Canadians who have had active contact with the Dominion's prohibition controversy.

Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, described prohibition conditions as a "national scandal."

"Well said one of his sons at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology told him "every fraternity in Greater Boston was solicited once a week by bootleggers."

Frances William Russell of Winnipeg, president of the Moderation League of Manitoba, told the committee that Western Canada "never had such a crime wave before as we had during the last two years of prohibition."

"Thank God we have got rid of it now. It went out with the bootlegger and the rum-runner."

In 1916 Winnipeg voted dry by 10,000. He said, but in 1923 it returned 23,000 majority against prohibition.

"Seventy per cent. of the women voted against prohibition," he continued. "They wanted to save their families. The only people who are not satisfied are the irreconcilable fanatics."

Declaring the present government control of liquor has resulted in an additional $3,000,000 revenue for the province, which is used for roads schools and hospitals, Mr. Russell

ROBS BACK BAY GEM STORE

Standing fifty feet from John J. Kingsley's jewelry store at No. 344 Boylston street today, a thief hurled a brick through the window, stole jewelry valued at $200 and escaped in an automobile.

So police are now searching for the man who presented a new version of the "brick-and-window game." This particular thief, they say, not only was original, but was possessed of a powerful arm, otherwise he could never have thrown the brick fifty feet.

PRESIDENT OUT IN CHINA COUP

Peking, April 10 (A.P.)—President Tuan Chi-Jui was deposed today in a coup d'etat, which had as its basis the calling of General Wu Pei-Fu, the Chinli war lord, by the leaders of the National army "to restore the political situation" in Peking.

The chief executive was placed under restraint as a consequence of an agreement between General Wu and the Kuominchun, or National army, leaders.

The coup was executed quietly early today. The bodyguard of the chief executive was disarmed.

ELDERS BAR PREACHER WHO INTRODUCED TEA ROOM GIRL TO PASTOR

While leaders of the Methodist Episcopal Conference sought "Tony" Fortin in Greater Boston today to testify before the committee investigating the alleged romance between the tea-room girl and the Rev. Guy Willis Holmes of New Bedford, the Rev. Kenneth Smith of Taunton, who introduced Holmes and the girl, was barred from membership in the conference.

The Taunton clergyman, associate pastor of the Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church in that city, was a probationer in the conference, but was to have been accepted as an elder today.

Reporting on Smith's qualifications, Rev. Earl E. Story of Providence told the conference which is in session at South Manchester, Ct., that the young pastor answered the educational requirements but was not of the requisite fitness otherwise. Mr. Storey is also a member of the committee of fifteen hearing the charges against Mr. Holmes.

Superintendent Robert L. Roberts of the local conference district, accompanied by two other clergymen, came from South Manchester to Winthrop to find Miss Fortin. At

MALDEN GIRL'S CHEEK RIPPED BY 'SLASHER'

A forty-year-old "Jack the slasher" ripped open the cheek and scratched the hands of Lorraine Palmer, fifteen years old of Malden, today, as she was walking through Irving street, a block from crowded Malden square.

He set upon the girl from behind, sneaking swiftly up to her and scratching her hand in several places with a knife or a long pin. As she turned to ward him off, he lunged at the girl's face, digging the weapon into her left cheek, and then fled into the shopping crowds.

In a brief struggle that ensued before he ran, however, he inflicted fifteen scratches on the girl's left hand.

Too frightened to shout, the Malden High School girl ran as fast as she could to her home at No. 7 Ashland street, in the Belmont Hill section. Her father, Chester P. Palmer, a member of the Malden fire department, notified the police.

A year ago, the girl surprised a burglar in her home and police saw a possibility that the slashing attack might be an act of vehemence in connection with that occurrence.

Only a short time ago she was the victim of a thief who stole her fur coat from the high school dressing room.

DR. RUTH HELD UNDER MANN ACT, IN $25,000

Dr. Erwin C. Ruth, former chief of the Federal Narcotic Bureau in Boston, who was arrested yesterday as he stepped from the Montreal flyer at the North Station, was today arraigned before United States Commissioner Jenney, charged with violation of the Mann act.

He pleaded not guilty and was remanded in custody of United States Marshal at Washington where he will go on trial.

Bail was set at $25,000 which he was unable to furnish and he was locked up in East Cambridge jail.

He admitted his identity and waived examination.

HINTS AT PLOT.

The former nemesis of local narcotic fiends and peddlers intimated to newspapermen that he had been lured to Boston by persons whose identity he refused to divulge, and that Federal officers forewarned of his arrival were on hand to arrest him.

Although there are other charges pending against him, they will not

BOY VANISHES ON WAY TO BANK WITH $1,300

Dropping out of sight while bound to a bank to deposit $1,300 for his employer, Joseph Levine of No. 635 Broadway, South Boston, twenty-year-old Myer Sharadsky of Dorchester, whose chief facial characteristic is a "Charley Chaplin moustache," was being sought today.

Fear was expressed that he may have been robbed and kidnaped.

Although the bank is only a short distance from Levine's store, the messenger did not arrive there, the police say, and also failed to return to his home.

He had been employed by Levine for some time, had no bad habits, and was considered trustworthy.

Police investigation revealed that Sharadsky's associates were all young men of good character. He had frequently taken money to the bank for his employer in the past and the sums he carried were fully as large as the amount entrusted to him on this occasion.

According to the police the young man looks older than he is, passing for twenty-five.

added that "the people now get the profit that the bootlegger used to get."

Senator Goff, Republican, West Virginia, asked for statistics as to the number of people who drink now and who drank during prohibition, but Mr. Russell could not give them.

PEOPLE OBEY LAW NOW.

He said that "during prohibition the favorite indoor sport was to defy the law."

"Now," he continued, "there is a change in the habit of the people of Manitoba. There is an increasing purchase of beer and wine as against hard liquor. Most of the sales of hard liquor are to visitors.

"We still have an aftermath of prohibition. This is the illicit sale of liquor in what you call 'speak easies.' We call them 'blind pigs,' but we are getting rid of that."

TRIED DRY, TURNED WET.

Other western provinces had the same experience as Manitoba, Mr. Russell continued, they went dry in 1916, and wet in 1923.

He explained that under the present government control liquor sales are made on permits, which cost one dollar a year.

"The permit has the address of the holder and the commission delivers the liquor to that address," he said. "Only persons over 21 years of age are given permits."

"Do you inquire into good character?" asked Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri.

"Each applicant must have a proposer."

"Is there any limit on the sale?"

"Yes, you can get only one case of hard liquor a week."

That got a prolonged laugh from the spectators, with the shrill voice of one woman rising above the others.

STRICT REGULATIONS.

"You would not want to buy a case next week unless you were going to have a banquet," the witness added. "If a man takes to drinking too much it is the duty of the commission controlling distribution to remonstrate with him."

Breweries and distilleries are under strict control, Mr. Russell said.

The first offense of violation is punished by a fine of $200 and costs, and for the second offense there is a jail sentence of six months or a year.

"If your regulation is so strict how do you account for so much liquor coming over the border into my State?" asked Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana.

"If I wanted to go into that business, it could be done," Russell replied. "Say there were five men in a family and five cases are delivered in a week. They could run some of it over the border to get the higher prices. If caught they would go to the penitentiary."

Senator Walsh insisted that the liquor coming from Canada was "the one problem" in enforcement in Montana.

"Well, Alberta province may not have adopted the one case a week law," the witness said.

ROUTS BOOTLEGGERS.

The "Quebec plan" of liquor control was explained to the committee by Sir William Stavert of Montreal, a member of the original liquor commission of Quebec province. Describing the operation of this plan as a "success," he said it took cognizance of the perversity of human nature by which men drink more when they are denied and less when they can get it.

Under the plan there is unrestricted sale of beer and wine, but sharp restrictions of the sale of hard liquor.

"Quebec has banished the bootlegger," said Sir William. "The commission can sell liquor as cheaply as the bootlegger, and when the commission sells has the official seal."

"Has the Quebec law increased intemperance?" Senator Reed asked.

"Yes, it has."

"Has crime decreased?"

"I can't say as to that."

"Are your people satisfied with the law?"

"They are."

Senator Harreld, Republican, Oklahoma, developed that the demand for the present Quebec plan came from those sections of the province where

PRINCIPALS AT CHURCH JURY TRIAL OF PASTOR ACCUSED BY NEW BEDFORD GIRL

DR. PARKHURST, NOTED PASTOR, HITS DRY ACT

New York, April 10 (A.P.)—Opposition to the present prohibition law was expressed today by the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, aged pastor emeritus of the First Presbyterian Church, famed a generation ago as a crusader against vice.

"My objection extends to the point that the law interferes with rights which are personal to the individual," he said in a statement to the Sun.

"The temperate use of spirits or liquor of any kind is an individual right justified by individual conscience, by old time usage, by the Bible. The mistake made by those responsible for the prohibition law has been in undertaking to do too much at the start.

"There are prohibitions which are justified. They are excesses to which liquor drinking or which are essentially criminal. If the law had wiped out those excesses it would have had the support of all.

"As the present situation is," he concluded, "the better classes of the people are against the law, and if proper enforcement of the law should be brought about there will be constant exasperation and the people will be left in a crumpled, unsatisfactory state of mind."

be pressed, United States District Attorney Williams said. The prisoner intimated that he would prefer to be tried in Washington where his family lived. Attorney Michael J. Horan appeared for Ruth today.

A mysterious woman, whose name Dr. Ruth withholds, awaited his arrival in Boston and stepped forward to greet him as he alighted. She remained when he was arrested and later disappeared without revealing her identity.

The prisoner was greeted familiarly by his former colleagues at the hearing. He appeared wearing a light suit of stylish mode, a closely clipped mustache and a debonair air. He said he had been engaged in the theatrical agency business in Montreal and that he was successful. He regretted having left Montreal to come to Boston.

According to Federal records, Dr. Ruth, then the local narcotic chief was tried for extortion. He induced a witness, Miss Mave Cookson of Needham, to leave town.

Since then, the government maintains, the pair traveled together, evading relentless Federal sleuths who always seemed to be a step behind.

Both were arrested in Kansas City in 1923 charged with selling narcotics. The woman was freed and Dr. Ruth released under bail, following which both vanished.

AIRSHIP NORGE LEAVES ITALY FOR ARCTIC

Rome, April 10. — The airship Norge of the Amundsen-Ellsworth polar expedition departed for Tuglon on the first leg of the journey to Spitsbergen at 9:25 this morning.

Colonel Umberto Nobile, in command of the flight, ordered the airship out of its hangar at the first indication that the stiff wind, which had kept the ship from starting earlier in the week, had slackened. It is the intention of the navigator of the Norge to fly her to Oslo, Norway, and thence to Spitsbergen, where a great hangar has been erected. The flight over the pole will begin probably next month.

Captain Roald Amundsen and his co-director in the flight, Lincoln Ellsworth of New York, will not board the Norge until its arrival at King's Bay, Spitzbergen.

Rev. James V. Cronin, curate at St. Catherine's Church, Somerville, was celebrant of the solemn high mass of requiem.

Rt. Rev. Mgr. Christopher T. McGrath, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Somerville, and the Rev. Mgr. Ambrose P. Roche, pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Watertown, occupied seats in the sanctuary.

VAUGHAN SUED BY WOMAN

Myra W. Platt of Boston today brought suit in Suffolk Superior Court for $50,000 for alleged breach of promise against Warren Vaughan of the Back Bay, who on May 6 last year was married to Miss Marion Gavin, Boston girl.

Mrs. Vaughan was the daughter of Mrs. Henry Armstrong of No. 477 Washington street, Dorchester, and of the late Nelson A. Phinney, and is a descendant of Governor Bradford and a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution. She is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music. Mr. Vaughan at the time of his marriage was a member of the Brookline Country Club and the Boston Art Club, and a cotton broker.

The couple were married in their future home, No. 270 Bay State road.

BOY OF 5 FLEES HOSPITAL

Haverhill, April 10 (A.P.)—Harold Evans, a five-year-old scarlet fever patient, fled from the contagious hospital early today by way of a fire-escape. Carrying his bedroom slippers in his hand to keep them from getting muddy, he walked barefooted to the home of his parents, nearly a mile away, clad only in a nightshirt.

The child aroused his parents by rapping on a window at his home. He said he had been lonesome for his mother. He was returned to the hospital by an agent of the Board of Health.

BRIAND STARTS FUND TO PAY OFF FRENCH DEBTS

Paris, April 10 (A.P.)—Premier Briand and the presidents of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, MM. De Selves and Herriot, have started voluntary contributions to the French sinking funds with gifts of 10,000 francs each. This official consecration of the idea of reducing th French interior and foreign debts by subscription is expected to put it under full motion. Marshal Joffre has accepted the post of chairman of the committee to receive the funds. Millions are already in sight, M. Coty, recently offered 100,000,000 francs in ten instalments, on condition that the money be spent for debt reduction and nothing else.

ONE-MAN CAR ROBBED BY THUGS WITH RIFLE

Worcester, April 10.—Armed with a rifle, two holdup men robbed Joseph LeClair, motorman of a one-man car, of $60 today, near the end of the Burncoat street car line.

One of the men pulled the trolley off just as LeClair started toward the city, with no passengers in the car. When the motorman went out to fix it, he found himself looking into the muzzle of a rifle. He was forced to hand over the proceeds of several trips.

Atlantic City, N. J., April 10 (A.P.). Poisons tha tcause uremia have been determined and isolated, according to claims made by Dr. Samuel Stern of this city, in a report made by him to the Atlantic County Medical Society.

Dr. Stern said that his research work had been carried on with the co-operation of William Miles, a chemist.

"By prolonged research and careful chemical tests," he said, "we found that cyanates are the cause of uremia. This is a distinct scientific discovery. It marks certain a victorious fight against this fatal condition."

Uremia is a form of autointoxication occurring in cases of inflammation of the kidneys.

ELDERS SEEK 'TONY' FORTIN

the Shore Drive residence where she has been staying they were informed she is visiting a cousin in Lafayette street, Salem.

The scene of the inquiry by the church elders may be shifted to New Bedford, where Holmes is pastor of the Pleasant Street Methodist Episcopal Church. The committee hearing was delayed for several hours today by the unexpected absence of important witnesses. It was said that they had been summoned by the Suffolk County Grand Jury, which is investigating an alleged trip of the married pastor with "Tony" to Boston.

A mysterious woman witness was waiting to be heard when the committee resumed its secret sessions. She was said to be the most important witness summoned by those who have brought charges against the pastor. The defence, however, professed an eagerness to have her testify.

Several New Bedford parishioners of Pastor Holmes, who waited in vain to testify on Friday, were again on hand today, still hoping to be allowed to say a word in his favor.

Attorney Ernest Laycock of New Bedford, who attended the conference hearings as a witness, but who is also counsel for the accused minister, declared that his client is ready to fight the charges tooth and nail, believing himself capable of proving his innocence and of showing the charges against him to be the result of a plot.

It was said at the conference that Rev. Kenneth Smith, after his transfer from the East Greenwich, R. I., parish last year, blamed "politics" for his transfer, and also made remarks commendatory of the Ku Klux Klan. Bishop William F. Anderson of Boston publicly denied Smith's assertion and said the transfer was due to educational limitations of the minister. Smith responded with a denial of the bishop's statement.

CORBETT GIRL'S BODY IS SEEN IN RIVER

Northampton, April 10.—Sworn from its hiding place by the Springfloods, the body of Alice M. Corbett, Smith College student, who disappeared November 13, was believed to have been seen in the Connecticut River near Smith's Ferry today.

Herbert H. Potter of Springfield reported to the police that while driving between this city and Holyoke he saw a woman's body floating down the river.

Police details from Northampton, Holyoke, Springfield, West Springfield, Chicopee and the State Constabulary barracks at Leeds were immediately detailed to patrol bridges, and along the banks of the stream to watch for the body.

FORD FAILS BOY SCOUTS

Henry Ford disappointed more than 400 Boy Scouts today by not being present to greet them when on their arrival on their annual historical hike they visited Wayside Inn at Sudbury as his guests.

Hoping the manufacturer would put in an appearance before the day was over, the scouts listened to a description of historical spots in the vicinity by J. F. Bigelow, former city engineer of Marlboro.

Thirty troops gathered at the famous inn, coming from Framingham, Marlboro, Hopkinton, Northboro, Wayland and other places. Upon entering the inn the invitation, Ford said he would be present if possible.

PAYROLL THIEF HOURS LATE

An attempted payroll robbery at the office of the L. S. Carpenter Metal Company, Main street, Cambridge, failed today because the thief arrived too late.

Armed with a revolver, a man of twenty-two entered the office shortly after noon and ordered Carpenter to "hand over the payroll and be quick." Carpenter told the intruder the employes had been paid last night.

After searching the room, the thug backed out and jumped into a waiting car.

Commandant Oliver W. Parker, who favors a fire-proof central building.

Veterans of the Civil and Spanish War are housed in this ancient frame building which has been described as a veritable fire trap. Many of the guests are infirm with age or wounds.

The State has provided a modern fire-proof structure to house the laundry and friends of the home point out it would be more consistent to house the veterans of the home with safety than the garments and linen.

B. B. Ballou and George B. Proctor, who fought in the Civil War, are types of the State's guests who are spending their declining days at the State Soldiers' Home at Chelsea and who prove welcome safe housing.

George B. Proctor is shown pointing out dangerous places in the foundation wall of the ancient frame structure which is used as a dormitory for hundreds of old soldiers.

Tots, Lured by Woman, Forced to Walk 20 Miles

BEDFELLOWS FOR BOARDER

WED IN ST. JOHN'S, ROXBURY

A cousin of the bridegroom celebrated the nuptial mass for the wedding of Marion Esther Silk to James Joseph Looney today in St. John's Church, Roxbury. Photo shows the bride and bridegroom (in front), Miss Margaret Wright, bridesmaid, and Arthur Looney, best, man, in the rear, and Evelyn K. Looney and Miss Alice Silk, maids of honor.

ONLY FOUR AND THREE YEARS OLD

Tiny Victims Recovering in Homes at Weston After Twelve Hours of Torture

Two little tots, Lillian Pogin and Ida Benoti, three and four years old respectively, were recovering in their homes on Conant road, Weston, today, from a harrowing experience such as seldom comes to children of their ages.

Lured from the yard in which they were playing by Jennie Towne, 24, also of Weston, the children were forced to walk more than twelve hours, finally being rescued by the police in Sudbury after having covered twenty miles.

Their tiny feet terribly swollen and blistered, the children were taken to their homes and placed under the care of physicians, while the Towne woman was held by the Weston police for mental examination.

According to the police, Lillian and Ida were playing in the yard of one of their homes when Miss Towne approached and asked them to accompany her to a nearby store.

They joyously agreed, and taking a hand of each child, the woman started to walk with them. Ahead of proceeding to the store, she led the children into Lincoln around through Wayland to Sudbury, where in a tearoom near the Marlboro line they were found by Chief Hill of the Sudbury police near midnight.

Time and time again during the long journey Lillian and Ida begged to be taken home, but the Towne woman, inexorable, the police say. After hours of walking the children were sobbing bitterly, scarce able to drag one foot after the other, but they were forced to go on until the tearoom was reached, the first stop in the journey.

STORROW HEIRS SAVE $959,625

Date of Death Results in Big Reduction in the Tax Against Estate

Because James J. Storrow, who left a fortune estimated at $16,250,000, died after February 26, instead of before that date, his estate is saved $959,625 in inheritance taxes.

The banker-philanthropist died on March 13, fifteen days after the new revenue act, carrying huge reductions in inheritance tax provisions, went into effect.

Experts today figured the tax on the Storrow fortune at $2,553,500, whereas under the old law it would have amounted to approximately $3,513,125.

BAY STATE HIT.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts, on the other hand, stands to lose a considerable sum on account of not having taken immediate advantage of certain provisions of the new Federal revenue act. This loss, on taxes from the Storrow heirs, might reach $918,800, it is said.

Under the old Federal law a deduction of 25 per cent. was allowed from the inheritance tax on an estate by reason of State inheritance taxes. Now this credit is increased to 80 per cent., but Massachusetts has not taken advantage of this leeway, although by so doing the State would not increase the burden on the heirs by one cent.

HEIRS LOSE $159,000.

Advantages also gained in the case of the Storrow estate by reason of the financier's death last month instead of a few months earlier, accrue on account of reciprocity arrangements as regards inheritance taxes made by Massachusetts and other States.

The fact that Mr. Storrow made arrangements apart from his will for giving $750,000 to charity will, however, make it necessary for the heirs to pay an additional $150,000 to the government, which they would not have had to pay if the charitable bequests were made in the will.

Walter Sheldon, host at the Back Bay apartment, who said he saw nothing odd in the arrangement

Mrs. Eleanor G. Sheldon, who told the court she, her husband and Earl F. Baker, their boarder, slept in the same bed, at the same time, in their Peterborough street, Back Bay, apartment. She and Baker were aroused by the police.

MONTREAL DEPARTURE MARKED BY SECRECY

Back From Paris Via Halifax, Leaves for Albany and New York

Montreal, April 10 (A.P.).—Surrounded by secrecy, Mrs. Gloria Gould Bishop, daughter of the late George J. Gould, left this city with two companions for Albany, N. Y., whence it is expected they will motor to New York.

Mrs. Bishop was met by her brother, Kingdon Gould of New York, here yesterday and last night left the Ritz-Carlton. She is returning to New York via Halifax after establishing a residence in France for the purpose, it is understood, of qualifying for the necessary residence conditions to get a divorce from Henry A. Bishop, Jr., to whom she was married in New York in September, 1921.

The baggage of the party last night was loaded into three taxicabs and rushed to Windsor Station. Mrs. Bishop followed in another car. The party sat on their trunks in the baggage room to wait the coming of their train, avoiding the station concourse or waiting room. Mr. Gould left for New York earlier yesterday.

MISS SILK WEDS J. J. LOONEY

One of the prettiest church weddings of the post-Lenten season was that of Marion Esther Silk, prominent young Roxbury belle, and James Joseph Looney, nephew of M. O'Keeffe, head of the M. O'Keeffe stores organization.

The ceremony took place today at a nuptial mass in St. John's Church, Blue Hill avenue. The wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. David Waters of St. John's Church. The Rev. Joseph Scanlon of New York, a cousin of the bridegroom, was the celebrant of the nuptial mass. Another cousin, the Rev. Arthur Scanlon, also of New York, and the Rev. James Murphy, of St. Ambrose Church, Dorchester, were seated within the sanctuary.

The bride was dressed in a costume of white georgette and wore a veil of tulle lace. She carried a huge wreath of lilies of the valley. Miss Margaret Wright, of Roxbury dressed in pink, was the bridesmaid. Arthur Looney, brother of the bridegroom, was the best man. Miss Evelyn K. Looney, a sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Alice Silk, a sister of the bride, were the maids of honor.

GLADYS COOPER.

New York, April 10 (I.N.S.).—Miss Gladys Cooper, motion picture actress, minus a pretty new gown which she had worn at the Princetonian Club earlier, threw West Forty-Second street police station into an uproar early today when she dashed in demanding justice, medical attention and dry clothes.

Miss Cooper revealed for a brief but adequate moment that she was clad beneath her fur coat in a fetching ensemble of shimmery lingerie, dainty slippers—and nothing more.

She said that a water tank at the climb had crashed down upon her, drenching her gown, and painfully bruising her shoulder. She discarded her ruined gown, she told police Lieutenant O'Grady.

Girl Gone as Notes Threatened If She Didn't Wed

Chicago, April 10 (I.N.S.).—Frieda Ulm has disappeared. At exactly the hour she was told in mysterious letters she would be spirited away if she did not marry "the Egyptian."—Saved Mehrem—she vanished this morning.

For months Frieda Ulm has been threatened with letters. So has "the Egyptian." It has been demanded that they marry. Both appealed to the courts.

A Northwestern University coed who once played a "poison pen" prank was questioned. Neither police, judge, newspaper, nor friends have been able to discover the "mystery letter writer."

BURBANK LOSES GROUND; HIS CONDITION GRAVE

Santa Rosa, Cal., April 10 (A.P.).—Luther Burbank gradually is losing ground in his fight against illness. A bulletin today from his physician, Dr. Joseph H. Shaw, said his patient's condition continues grave. "He had a restless night," the bulletin continued, "although he slept better after 5:30 a. m." There are certain factors about Mr. Burbank's illness that are encouraging, Dr. Shaw said, "but it is a question whether they can hold out against a predonderance of adverse symptoms."

50c Haircut Back

Chicago, April 10 (A.P.).—The fifty-cent haircut, absent several months, is back in many loop barber shops, although some still charge 60 or 75 cents. After the price boost, business decreased 30 per cent.

Crew Saved from Ice as Ship Burns

St. John's, N. F., April 10 (A.P.).—One member of the crew of the sealing steamer Seal lost his life when the vessel burned in Bay de Verde yesterday after an explosion of ammunition in her magazine. Five others suffered serious burns.

The survivors arrived here today on board the government steamer Eagle, which began a race last night to rescue the 79 men marooned on the ice.

The men were able to get off with the small boats and later started for shore, eight miles away, over the ice floes. The blazing ship behind them was visible on shore when the fog lifted momentarily.

Shelburne, N. S., April 10 (A.P.).—The government steamer Arvas has succeeded in releasing the Gloucester fishing schooner Josephine DeCosta, which had been on the rocks in Shelburne harbor since Sunday last. The schooner is believed to have suffered no damage.

YOUNG ALLSTON WOMAN GONE

Miss Mary Neal, twenty-six years old, and daughter of Mrs. Christopher Neal, of No. 62 Aldie street, Allston, was reported missing today.

Miss Neal, who had been complaining of illness for several weeks, disappeared after her day's work in a Boston store. She drew her week's wages and did not appear at home at night.

She is one of nine children. Her mother told the Boston Evening American today that the only possible explanation of the disappearance was that her daughter may have suffered a sick spell.

She is described as 5 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 120 pounds. She wore a wine-colored coat, trimmed with gray fur. A signet ring on her right hand bears the inscription, "P. H. S." according to information furnished the police by the mother.

TWO HURT WHEN AUTO CRASHES INTO TREE

Two men were hurt, one severely, today, when an automobile crashed into a tree on Cambridge road, Woburn. Walter Fitzpatrick, twenty-four of Pinedale road, Billerica, has a broken right leg and severe cuts. William W. Morrissey of West street, Medford, the driver, was treated for cuts.

Morrissey told authorities that a heavier car crowded his machine from the road and he lost control.

A camp at Billerica was searched in vain today for the three Somerville high school girls, who vanished Tuesday after leaving their homes for school.

The girls are Margaret Barry of No. 65 Atherton street, Jane Leahy of No. 171 Somerville avenue and Margaret Haggerty of No. 16 Monmouth street.

Belief that the girls might have gone to a camp at Billerica, where they spent their vacations last Summer, led Police Chief Kendall to turn the hunt in that direction. The camp, however, was unoccupied.

The mother of the Haggerty girl expressed the opinion that her daughter might be hiding because she fears a scolding for "skipping" school.

KING HORSE REIGNS NEXT WEEK AT NEW RIDING CLUB SHOW

MRS. FRED W. BUSH.

MRS. ARTHUR M. BEALE.

MISS EVELYN CUMMINGS

HORSE IS KING NEXT Wednesday and Thursday evenings when thoroughbreds prance through their paces and over the jumps at the New Riding Club's indoor shows. All the favorite blue-ribbon horses are entered.

AND FROM the first class, that of ponies, right through to the hunt teams of three horses each, sport of the highest is promised. Frederick H. Sears and Mrs. Gardner H. Fiske, Mrs. Reginald W. Bird and Miss Patricia and Miss Betty Bird, Miss Miriam Winslow have entered their mounts.

BIRD ENTRIES are of the Chocolate variety—the "Chocolate Soldiers," "Sweet Chocolate" and "Chocolate." Miss Winslow's "Tip Top," Miss Mary Louise Almy with her famous ribbonee, "Hempstone," and Miss Elizabeth Sprague's "Scarlet Rambler" will furnish thrills for the gallery.

THAT VALIANT horsewoman Mrs. Robert B. Almy (the one time Rosamond Adiel), has a horse "Sandy," on the lists. Miss Betty Knapen's "Diana" and Mrs. Nathaniel Farwell Ayer's pair, "Goodman" and "Goodwill," also promise a pretty tanbark performance.

IN FACT, practically every well known stable will have its colors there. For instance, Mrs. Homer Loring, Elmer Jared Bliss, Tower Hill, Miss Gwendolyn Wolff and Mrs. W. H. Christy. Some of these will go over the hurdles in the hunt class.

MISS CORNELIA CLARK, daughter of J. Dudley Clark (the former polo player), is down for an appearance in the ring. To name each class would be to recount nearly two dozen, and as for the entries those run into the hundreds. A phenomenal success, it promises, and certainly is a happy innovation hereabouts.

THE CHINESE Lantern Festival Cabaret for the Infants' Hospital held at the Copley-Plaza last night has twinkled itself into social history as another top-notch frivolity, to the everlasting honor of credit of its originators—Mesdames F. Wadsworth Bush, Henry Parsons King, Jr., and Arthur M. Beale.

ALSO MESDAMES WILLIAM DEXTER, William E. Lail, Louis Curtis, Jr., Sherwood Rollins, E. Preble Motley, Jr., John Gear, George Putnam, Phillip Stockin, Thomas Blumer, W. Davis Sohier, James C. White, Frederic M. Bush, Jr., and Miss Frances Clark—that caddi the complete role.

BLACK QUEUED China boys as waiters, China girls in gorgeous Far-Eastern robes to sell flowers; Thayer Cummings and Charles L. Harding, Jr., to do a pianologue of jazz; Mrs. Edmund S. St. Brandt to sing, to William Godfrich's accompaniment, furnished the cabaret.

AND ALL SOCIETY came to a dance—to the music of a popular orchestra—in a ball room transformed under the magic of Mrs. Arthur M. Beale's deft touch and imaginative genius. Enormous Mandarin fans, quite a dozen feet in length, alternately burnt orange and matrix green, outlined the ball room.

DOZENS OF lanterns flickered overhead. In the foyer the fragrance and color of countless blossoms flaunted brightly. Anderson, Weld, Thayer and other conservatories sent quotas—and nothing more exquisite than the Thayer contributions.

WAX-LIKE camillas came from Mrs. Bayard Thayer's Lancaster conservatories, also the fragile Cherokee roses, and to add still many another pretty penny to the Hospital Fund, there were luscious strawberries, each as large as a plum in its bed of leaves.

"EVERYBODY" WENT, in fact a Social Register outpouring. Mr. and Mrs. Frederic Cameron Church entertained, as did the Wallace Goodriches, Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames (who had the Francis I. Amorys and Reginald Boardman at her table) and Mrs. Nathaniel F. Emmons. Also the George von L. Meyers, the Dudley Howes and Theodore Frothingams, Jr.

MRS. THORNDIKE DUDLEY HOWE and Mr. Howe, Mrs. John L. Grandin, the Richard Saltonstalls, Mrs. E. Sohier Welch, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bayles, Mrs. Harold Jefferson Coolidge, Mrs. John S. Lawrence and Mr. Lawrence, F. Murray Forbes, Richard Lawrence, Paul Barron Watson, Jr., the Robert F. Herricks, all were there.

PETITE AND energetic Mrs. Wadsworth Bush, polishing off the cabaret to a complete success and most appropriately having a real Chinese orchestra for the last number, departed on the midnight train for New York, to be a guest today, with others of her family, at the James Jackson Lee-Emily Schinkewind wedding.

MISS GRACE SARGENT, setting off her dark beauty in a frock and brought from Paris for the occasion, was honor maid and sole feminine attendant for Miss Helen Sargent, when the latter plighted her troth today to Walter Keith Shaw, Jr.

PERVENCHE BLUE CHIFFON over palest pink, its hem-line swirl accomplished by godets of velvet, a wide Rommey hat of blue ornamented by a single pink rose, a bouquet of roses, sweet peas and purple iris for the bridesmaid with conventional white for the bride made a pretty wedding picture.

VERY SIMPLE in line was the bride's gown. Of satin, it carried in stately length a court train elaborately designed of satin and lovely rose point lace. Tulle bound low at the back of the coiffure added the frothy, airy note, and the bride bouquet was a melange of roses lilies and gardenias.

THE STEAMSHIP PARIS outbound carries Mr. and Mrs. Eliot Wadsworth of Boston; also the Frank C. Paines off on the first leg of their journey which ends in British East Africa, where Mr. Paine after big game, will gather trophies of the hunt.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT S. GROSS have embarked on the Paris of the French line, which also takes Ferdinand Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lyman, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Jackson Holmes and Mrs. Frank H. Monks.

WOMAN BACKS BILL TO AID CHILDREN

Mrs. Percival Waters, president of the Fathers' and Mothers' Club of Boston, today indorsed the bill recently passed by the House and now before the United States Senate, providing Federal aid for dependent children under sixteen years of age whose mothers live in the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Waters.

"The plan to administer Federal aid to needy children in their homes is most commendable. The measure should be made a national law," said Mrs. Waters.

"No care of a child can compare with that of a worthy mother. Hence, no institution, no matter how expensively or efficiently conducted, can compare with the home. The latter has a more permanent influence. Every dollar spent for child welfare work under the supervision of a suitable mother will go infinitely further than dollars spent by children's institutions.

"They would be spared the ordeal of being torn from their mother and clapped into a cold institution with other unfortunates.

"Also they would be saved from the danger of being farmed out to undesirable persons. Home aid, carefully investigated and supervised, I consider a real boon in child welfare. As head of the Fathers' and Mothers' Club, which handles many children, I can appreciate the merits of such a measure."

B. C. TO DEBATE WORLD COURT

COOLIDGE HIT BY ARCHBISHOP CURLEY

Baltimore, April 10 (I.N.S.).—A lengthy article, written by Archbishop Michael J. Curley, criticising President Coolidge for entertaining at the White House Manuel Telles, the Mexican ambassador, and Puig Casaurane, the Mexican minister of instruction, appeared today in the Catholic Review, the diocesan organ of Baltimore.

After citing the Mexican government's expulsion of Catholic nuns and priests from the country, Archbishop Curley wrote:

"Now we have no interest whatever in White House entertainments but in this particular case we have an interest. The social recognition of the Red minister, the persecution of Catholic sisters, the destroyer of Christian education, has been made much of by the Reds and Calles the President's back home, and now we are told that our President and our Secretary of State approve the whole hellish attitude of Puig Casaurane.

"I am not saying this is true. I am sure it is not. But the interpretation put upon the luncheon given to Puig is precisely one of approval by our government of the bitter anti-Catholicism of the gunmen now ruling and running Mexico.

"Are we asking the American government to intervene in Mexico? We are not asking any such thing. We are asking the Washington authorities to cease their continual intervention. Calles continues his persecution of the church today because he feels he stands in with Washington.

PRINCE CAROL'S TRIP STIRS EUROPE

Berlin, April 10 (I.N.S.)—The whereabouts of Prince Carol of Rumania caused mystification and great excitement in Central Europe today.

Budapest dispatches state definitely that Prince Carol has crossed the Rumanian border into Transylvania. It is reported that Prince Carol intends to effect a reconciliation with his mother, Queen Marie, possibly resuming his duties as crown prince.

Another report indicates that Prince Carol has gone among the Nationalists there. It is reported that Mme. Lupescu accompanies him.

These reports are unconfirmed and appear to be based on the statements of hotel attaches and a customs official, who declare that a man traveling under the name of Belin Al Badu is in reality Prince Carol.

The central European radio service, however, flatly denied the reports and declares that the rumors are based on a mistaken identity and that the supposed Prince Carol is in reality a Rumanian merchant who is the double of Prince Carol.

FORD MAKES NEW OFFER FOR SHOALS PLANT LEASE

Washington, April 10 (I.N.S.).—Henry Ford has submitted a new offer for the lease and operation of the government's great power plant at Muscle Shoals, according to reports current at the Capitol today. Members of the Muscle Shoals leasing committee, meeting in executive session, declined to confirm or deny the reports.

Well What D'ye Know About That?

Leipsic—Harry Nelson, professional faster, is in the housegow, having been taken from a cage, in which the police found he had lived for a month by receiving soup and malt through a rubber tube.

Los Angeles—As Sergeant Sweetman put it, policemen don't use their mental faculties while on duty. Asked if he was human, he replied: "I am a police officer," all this in the municipal court when the sergeant was testifying that "Desire Under the Elms" had a bad effect on the audience but did not corrupt him.

FARCE, FROLIC AND FIERCE MELODRAMA SPICE THE BILLS AT LOCAL PLAYHOUSES

LOOKS LIKE EASY MONEY for Victor Moore and Otto Kruger, a couple of farcical financiers in "Easy Come, Easy Go," the merry vehicle that will rattle forth on the stage of the New Park Monday night.

THE LOVERS' TRIUMPH in "Ben-Hur" at the Colonial. May McAvoy and Ramon Novarro see the finish of all their enemies.

'Ray, 'Ray! for Marion Sunshine, dazzling principal in "Captain Jinks" at the Shubert. Here is the lady who has such a sunny disposition she hardly knows how to frown.

THIS BRIDLE PAIR harness up for these nuptials eight times a week at the Castle Square. Ted Gibson and Lorna Carrel still at it in "Abie's Irish Rose."

THIS VEIL OF TEARS with William Hodge in "The Judge's Husband" at the Plymouth seems to be quite a laughing matter with the younger folks, Alexander Clark, Jr., and Ruth Lyons.

LIFE IS MELODRAMA AND PLENTY OF IT

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

THE foundation of the theatre is melodrama—pure, untarnished melodrama taken right out of life. That is the Holbrook Blinn view of his own profession and its highly tinted product. Blinn probably is right; he has good reason to be, for his contact with the theatre as an actor has taught him many things and has trained his eye to what you might call audience reaction. He insists that life, even the dull, prosaic life of the suburbs is crammed to the brim with melodrama.

OF course, Mr. Blinn may be forgiven for favoring melodrama in our entertainment, for when it is exceptionally good, as you find it in "The Dove" at the Tremont, he usually is an important link in a chain of stirring events. As a bad man he holds high rank in the theatre. The stage may have presented more desperate criminals, but for highly polished, unrelenting evil Mr. Blinn does a great deal more than just pretty well. In "The Dove," as in that other roaring bit of villainy that once gave him fame, "The Bad Man," he is suspiciously natural. This is a tribute to his art, not a conviction that he really may be as bad as he is painted.

FOR Blinn, privately, is an exceedingly quiet, well mannered man of soft words and a persuasive smile. "Melodrama," he repeated, "is a great part of life. The daily papers are full of it; we are always hearing of plots and incidents in daily life that are more melodramatic than anything a playwright would dare put upon a stage. Why, man alive, the Chapman letters published in your own American furnish a deeper plot for a smashing melodrama than anything I have ever seen on the stage or in print. That first Chapman letter is a perfect Belasco drama—almost custom made. And yet they will tell you that the stage is all exaggeration—imaginative, not real. Good melodrama is always on tap, in the theatre and out of it; that's why it endures."

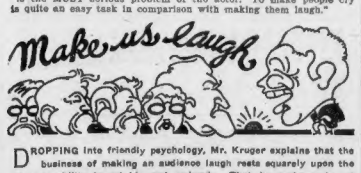
THIS BOY STICKS—Harold Healy, who plays one of the marines in "Rain" and who also is the commissioned stage manager of the company, has had but two engagements in eight years—and has never enjoyed an idle moment. Mr. Healy served faithfully in "The Bat" for four years and then joined the Jeanne Eagels family in "Rain," which is now drawing toward the end of its fourth season.

MAKING PEOPLE LAUGH IS LIKE ANY OTHER JOB IN SALESMANSHIP, SAYS OTTO

ANY comedian will tell you that being funny is a serious business, not to be taken too lightly. Otto Kruger, a smiling fun maker of many happy exploits who will become a tenant at the New Park in "Easy Come, Easy Go," takes an even more advanced view of comedy. "The business of making other people laugh," he insists, "is the MOST serious problem of the actor. To make people cry is quite an easy task in comparison with making them laugh."



DROPPING into friendly psychology, Mr. Kruger explains that the business of making an audience laugh rests squarely upon the player's ability to act his part seriously. That, he ventures, is not always easy. "And," he goes on, "have you ever seen anything sadder than a comedian that is not funny? An audience will not laugh at an actor when he is obviously getting fun out of his own work. The surest laughs are those born of trouble and misery. A tragic situation in farce, with the principal character in torture, is an old and never failing standby with the farce builders."

SPEAKING with some authority, Mr. Kruger reminds you that selling humor is not only a serious affair but an exacting one. "And it is pure salesmanship," he adds, "because every audience meets you with a grim determination to make you show your wares—and show them properly. Here I am—now make me laugh' is an old saying in the theatre, and it is often pitilessly true."

WHAT'S WHAT WITH SHOWS REMAINING

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

"The Dove" at the Tremont. (Second week.) Sizzling melodrama, with Holbrook Blinn doing a very nice job.

William Hodge in "The Judge's Husband" at the Plymouth. (Ninth week.) Having a good laugh on the ladies.

"Seventh Heaven" at the Hollis. (Fourth week.) To which all the girls may go and have a good cry.

"Aloma of the South Seas" at the Wilbur. (Seventh week.) Concerning good and bad folk on a tropical isle. The last week.

"Abie's Irish Rose" at the Castle Square. (Twenty-eighth week.) Still here; what more may be said?

Ada-May in "Captain Jinks" at the Shubert. (Fourth week.) A nimble chorus keeps everyone interested.

"Ben Hur" at the Colonial. (Eighth week.) Showing just how tough the ancient Roman really was.

* * *

"The Big Parade" at the Majestic. (Thirteenth week.) John Gilbert goes to war and comes home all shot up.

Boston Debut for Italian Prima Donna Tomorrow

Boston music lovers will have an opportunity to hear Mme. Solari, tomorrow evening, when she will appear in concert in Symphony Hall with Giacomo Quintano, violinist, Giulio C. Nardella, operatic tenor and Anna Piccirilli, pianist. Mme. Solari, after notable triumphs at the Scala Opera House in Milan, Italy, as a soprano, came to America early last year for a series of concerts in large cities of this country. Everywhere the artists has been greeted with the same enthusiasm she received abroad. Mme. Solari has sung leading roles in Italy with artists of recognized ability, such as Gigli, Schipa, DeLuca, Danise, Johnson, Bori and Galli-Curci.

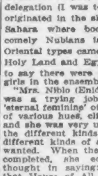
EXTRA GIRLS A PROBLEM IN 'BEN-HUR'

Fred Niblo gathered beauties from all the Mediterranean countries for the picturization of "Ben-Hur," now at the Colonial.



Fred Niblo

"I got a commissionaire in Paris," said Mr. Niblo, "to hire the Folies Bergere dancing girls to week-end in Rome and do the festal maidens in the foreground of the triumph of Arrius. Seems funny that all Italy could not provide these lily-like revelers, but it's a fact."

"For my black beauties in the Orchard of Palms scene I had recourse to Tripoli, and some of the delegation (I was told by my agent) originated in the slave marts of the Sahara where bootlegging of the comely Nubians is still practiced. Oriental types came from Syria, the Holy Land and Egypt, and needless to say there were plenty of Roman girls in the ensemble scenes, too.

"Mrs. Niblo (Enid Bennett) saw it was a trying job to handle the 'eternal feminine' of a score or more of various hues, climes and lingoes, and she was very useful in teaching the different kinds of beauties the different kinds of action that were wanted. When the ensembles were completed, she echoed my own thought in saying: 'My! I'm glad that House of All Nations is over and is packing up!'"

Janet Opens Her Show With a Long Distance Hike

Eleonora Sears is not to have the exclusive feminine rights to the record for walking between Providence and Boston if Janet Beecher, of "The Kiss Thief," knows anything about it. For Miss Beecher has her self something of an athlete, is given to walk to Boston from Providence sometime during the day of April 18th, in time to reach her dressing room at the Wilbur Theater to make up and go on to play her part in the farce that opening night.

Janet Beecher

This will not be the first time Miss Beecher has walked long distances. Two seasons ago, while booked to appear in Detroit, the train broke down twenty miles outside the city and instead of waiting for the relief train to carry her to her destination, the actress set forth and tramped the distance accompanied by two members of her company.

NEXT WEEK'S NEW BILLS

NEW PARK—"Easy Come, Easy Go," a farce by Owen Davis. Fun extracted from the exploits of two bank robbers who seek a haven of refuge in a sanitarium. In the cast are Otto Kruger, Victor Moore, Shirley Grey and Edward Arnold. The piece is presented in a prologue and three acts.

COPLEY—"The Rotters," a comedy by H. F. Maltby. Like many of Mr. Clive's offerings this play comes from over the sea and concerns an amusing family in an old English town. The principal roles are taken by C. Wordley Hulse, Katherine Standing, May Edliss and Terence Neill.

* * *

REPERTORY—(Starting Tuesday) "The Wild Duck," by Henrik Ibsen. Has already been presented successfully by Mr. Jewett's players this season. Dallas Anderson returns to the cast to play Hialmar Ekdal. Others in the company are Ruth Taylor, Peg Entwistle, Agnes Elliot Scott, Horace Pollock, William Kershaw and Charles Quartermaine.

THE MALE MASQUERADE

By MARION DAVIES.
Star of "Beverly of Graustark" at Loew's State.

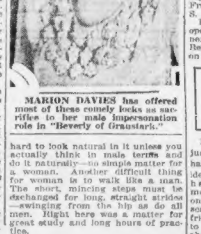
With so many men of the stage and screen giving such clever female impersonations, I am glad of the opportunity afforded in several of my pictures to do something by way of retaliation. In the George Barr McCutcheon story, "Beverly of Graustark," there is a "mass masquerade" sequence that I consider the "best yet."

A woman playing a man's part greatly depends on the woman herself, for, strange to say, a "masculine" woman is not at all capable. Only a distinctly feminine personality can successfully masquerade as the opposite sex. And why is this so? Because the mannish type of woman merely apes mannish manners without wholly hiding her femininity. But the really feminine woman, if she is an actress, stands more of a chance to erase her female characteristics because she is more aware of them and has them to erase.

The woman used to adopting masculine mannerisms, however, only tries to adopt some more, but pays no attention to submerging her essentially feminine tricks, subconsciously denying she has them. To make a woman's face look like a man's is almost the same as rubbing an eraser over a woman's picture. I had to remove every feminine trace from my face; alter my eyebrows, paint my eyelashes so they wouldn't show, paint my lips down to a mere slit, and then the hair cut!—in short, the makeup process was used not to add to the face but to remove what was there, hence the method of erasure.

After the question of looking the part, as determined by the costume and makeup, next came the more difficult matter of thinking and acting in the manner of the sterner sex. To get into the proper frame of mind for any character, it is most certainly necessary to think in the role as much as possible. To aid me in this, I re-read such books as "The Three Musketeers" and "The White Company" chosen because they echo the most purely male psychology I could think of.

After reading awhile, it became natural to wear a uniform. It's easy to get into the regalia, but mighty hard to look natural in it unless you actually think in male terms and do it naturally—no simple matter for a woman. Another difficult thing for woman is to walk like a man. The short, mincing steps must be exchanged for long, straight strides—swinging from the hip as do all men. Right here was a matter for great study and long hours of practice.



MARION DAVIES has offered most of these comely locks as sacrifice to her male impersonation role in "Beverly of Graustark."

GOOD AND BAD ALIKE ARE HER WILLING VICTIMS

HERE'S A SIREN with a perfect score. Judith Anderson, the gay coquette of "The Dove" at the Tremont, makes all men stop, look and listen.

YALE BOYS TO GIVE PLAY AT REPERTORY

The Yale University Dramatic Association will present an original play, "Out o' Luck," by Tom Cushing, Yale '02, at the Repertory Theatre on Monday evening, under the auspices of the Yale Club of Boston. This is the first trip of the Yale Dramatic Club to Boston in over ten years.

"Out o' Luck" is a comedy of "doughboy" life in France, written from notes made by the author during the St. Mihiel drive in August and September, 1918. Nearly every episode in the action is based on actual happenings; the author has injected many incidents personally witnessed by him, and with a sure eye for comic effect in word and situation has drawn a sympathetic picture for which the war sets the stage.

Among the Greater Boston boys who will take part in the production are: Robert Sunderson, '27; George Sanderson, '28; Ogden E. Myers, '26; William M. Hinkle, '27; Francis R. Doyle, '27, and Theodore S. Ryan, '27.

Because of this performance, the opening of "The Wild Duck," the next play to be presented by the Repertory Company, will take place on Tuesday afternoon.

MONEY AND HAPPINESS

By BEN TAGGART.
With "Aloma of the South Seas" at the Wilbur.

Money is a good thing to have just enough of, but it not good to have too much or too little. The ideal state is to have enough money to live on the same scale as one's friends, and then to think as little about money as possible. It is not a good thing to have more money than the people you travel with and one cannot be happy who has less.

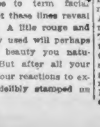
Ben Taggart

I remember a young fellow who attended the same school that I did; he had more money than the rest of us—he had a rich and generous father. That fellow never could understand the other students, because he lived on a different financial scale, he had nothing in common with us and consequently was unhappy. Money breeds discontent, but it shouldn't be so, for success is not measured by the size of a person's bank account. Some people do great deeds to serve humanity and are honored throughout the land, yet, at death leave very little cash, but they have built lasting monuments—these people truly achieve success.

We should not envy the wealthy; we should be honored to call them friend from foe, as he is constantly surrounded by satellites who flatter and humor him—and he would learn a lot if he could convince his supposed friends that he had lost his fortune with no hope of regaining it. Everyone should aim to do at least one worth-while thing during life that would help others—that would mark success. Personally, I would rather achieve artistic success, have lots of genuine friends with only a fair share of the world's goods, than lots of money with a dissolution of no particular achievement.

Gladys Hanson Advises On Photographer's Art

"Be yourself," that's the message broadcast to women by lovely Gladys Hanson, leading woman for William Hodge, at the Plymouth in "The Judge's Husband." She declares openly that when she has her pictures taken, she wants to be revealed as she is, and not be subjected to the usual retouching of negatives that removes from the face all lines of character.



Gladys Hanson.

"A photograph should represent you as you really are," says Miss Hanson. "Suppose one has a line here and there—lines that beauty specialists choose to term facial blemishes—do not these lines reveal your character? A little rouge and powder discreetly used will perhaps emphasize what beauty you naturally possess. But after all your characteristics, your reactions to experience, are indelibly stamped on your face."

Victor Herbert Operetta at the Opera House

"Sweethearts," Victor Herbert's musical comedy, will be presented at the Boston Opera House on Tuesday evening, May 11th, by the Jewish Juniors, the entire proceeds to be use, for charity—namely to buy a convelescent home for children.

The committees, of which Alfred Harris is chairman, has been working tirelessly to put this benefit across. Several stars who have been seen on local stages in different professional productions this season have been engaged for the production.

NORMA GIVES BATTLE IN 'MET' FILM

Norma Talmadge and Gertrude Astor recently engaged in a hair pulling match in Hollywood. When the battle ended, with honors about even, they shook hands amidst the applause of many interested spectators. Miss Talmadge and Miss Astor weren't really angry; it was all part of the shooting of "Kiki." Norma's latest vehicle, which shows at the Metropolitan for the new week.

The story of "Kiki" calls for a knock-down, drag-out battle between Miss Talmadge, playing the part of a Paris waif, and Miss Astor, as a French theatrical star. They are rivals—in the picture—for the heart of a theatre manager (Ronald Colman). Director Clarence Brown decreed that it should be a real fight, with no doubles or love pats.

"Fight!" urged Brown. "You're bitter enemies. French women, when they get mad enough, make Carmen and other wild ones look like kindergarten girls." And they fought. Norma's admirers, who associate her with dignified, cultured roles, would have a difficult time recognizing the star if they had seen her battling with Miss Astor. Dress shiaza and hair dishevsled, they were what the spectators termed "a sight."

HENRY MILLER'S DEATH SHOCKS THEATRE WORLD

New York, April 10 (I.N.S.)—The theatrical world was shocked today by the death of Henry Miller, actor, director and producer for more than fifty years. He died of pneumonia. He was sixty-six years old. Although born in London, Miller made his first stage appearance in Toronto in "Amy Robsart." At the age of twenty he appeared for the first time on the New York stage in "Cymbeline." Miller's greatest success was scored in the role of Stephen Ghent in "The Great Divide." He leaves a wife, a son and a daughter.

Wheeze By Mr. A. Kappeler.

"Did you hear," remarked Alfred Kappeler, the hard boiled street washer in "Seventh Heaven," "that there is a plan on foot to put whiskers on Ford cars to make them look like A. Lincoln?" Don't kill him, boys, he has a wife and six children.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Rattling the Old Skeleton.

Ralph Larsen, the modest poet laureate of the local B. F. Keith theatres, was a dare-devil aviator during the World War. He thought nothing of hopping from Kelly Field, in Texas, to Montgomery, Ala., just for luncheon.

CLIPPINGS OF CINEMA COMEDY CAPERS CULLED FROM THE WEEK'S SHOWINGS

A POOR MAN IN THE PINCH is William Orlamond on the receiving end of Parisian derision from Norma Talmadge as "Kiki," in the fabasco Belasco heroine in this new Metropolitan film of the same name.

DUPES THE DUKE. Marion Davies' male male impersonation fools Antonio Moreno in "Beverly of Graustark," at Loew's State. But the last reel finds him marryin' Marion.

HE WHO GETS SLAPPED is surprised to find that he couldn't make a hit with the lady on the squeeze play—that is, not so soon in the game. So the boy is out on strikes, hard ones. John Gilbert and Renee Adoree in "The Big Parade."

A RECORD RUN—her hosiery proves it—for Clara Bow, the dashing heroine of "The Runaway," new film at the Fenway. Warner Baxter is the unshaved gent.

RENEE IS GLAD SHE LIVES IN AMERICA

Although she had been in this country for some years, Renee Adoree, the adorable Mellisande in "The Big Parade," had her first big chance when King Vidor selected her for this production now at the Majestic Theatre. Renee was playing in Belgium when the Germans broke through and stayed there until driven out by them. She then drifted to England and finally to America. After playing a few unimportant roles in New York, Adoree reached Hollywood, and now, by reason of her success in "The Big Parade," is in a fair way to become a popular star.

"I often wonder if the American people know how much they have to be thankful for," said Adoree not long ago. "I have been pretty well over this country, yet I find no poverty. Every one has work and money. Even the people whom you consider poor are rich in comparison with the poor you find in Europe. And you have so many comforts which they know nothing about. They are necessities to the American people but they would be luxuries over there.

"And I cannot help but contrast in particular the life in your theatres with the life the average player leads over there. I was born in a circus tent and brought up in the theatre. My father's circus was no elaborate affair such as the great ones you know. We traveled and lived in wagons and in the tents, but to have cars to ride in on the railroad would have involved an expense that we could not stand. Yes indeed I am glad to be in America."

VARIETY AND PICTURES

Charleston Students May Now Learn From Movies

The latest screen novelty, the "Charleston in six lessons," is now showing at the two downtown Olympia theatres—the Washington street and the Scollay Square. This popular and instructive screen course has for its author and star, Arthur Murray, acceded the motion's finest dancing instructor. Surely Mr. Murray, who has had Lord Renfrew, better known as the Prince of Wales, for a pupil, can explain the supposedly difficult steps of the Charleston to each one of his cinematic pupils.

Advice to the Near-Genius From Copley Player

"One of the most pathetic things in the world is the near-genius, the person who has some spark of talent that raises him a bit above the ordinary, but which is not strong enough to blaze up into the flrg of success," says C. Wordley Hulse of the Copley Theatre. "If I shall not be thought egotistical, I should like to state that I believe in trying and never giving up, but if, after a long period and consistent effort, you discover that no editor will accept your stories, no magazine will buy your pictures, no theatrical man will give you a place in his company, no motion picture director will give you a trial, make up your mind that you have chosen the wrong calling and try something else."

D'Arcy Says Film Villains Make Good Comedians

A successful screen villain must have a sense of humor. This is the contention of Roy D'Arcy, who is seen as the Prince in "Monte Carlo," the new film at Loew's Orpheum. "Villains," says D'Arcy "are always, both on the screen and off, just a tiny bit funny and the screen villain who takes himself too seriously loses a great deal in his interpretation. "It is much easier for a man who has played heavies to turn comedian than one who has done nothing but romantic roles. Take Lew Cody, for instance. There is one of the best he-vamps on the screen, yet he has turned out to be a peerless comedian."

CHANGES IN VAUDEVILLE

B. F. KEITH'S—Brooks Johns forsakes Broadway and returns with his company, including Goodee Montgomery and the Oklahoma Collegians; Bert and Betty Wheeler, Follies comedians, also back in the two-a-day; Larry Stoutenburgh, pocket billiard expert; Senator Murphy in a humorous take-off, "The People's Choice"; Bryand and Fairchild in dance act; the Wyse Folks in "A Family Revue, and others.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM—Kikuta Japs, troupe of Oriental wonder workers; Elsie White in Character Song Impressions; Hunting and Frances in a sketch, "Sunshine Valley"; Taylor and Howard in a skit, "Officer 6%"; Roy, Conway and Thomas in "Just Two Fellows and a Girl"; Laremple and company in a mystery, "The Enchanted Palace," and others. The feature film is "Monte Carlo" with Lew Cody and Gertrude Olmsted.

The first Boston song recital of Judith Litante, young English soprano of Italian and Russian ancestry, takes place next Wednesday evening, April 14, in Jordan Hall. Her program will include numbers from Schumann, Moussorgsky, Debussy and Scarlatti.

Southern Beauty Appears In New Olympia Film

Corliss Palmer

Corliss Palmer, Southern beauty, to be seen for the first time in a feature length picture in "Her Second Chance," at the Olympia, got her chance in the movies through winning a prize beauty contest. Miss Palmer hails from Georgia and is described as a typical "peaches and cream" Georgia Venus. Subsequent to her winning the beauty prize, the little actress was eagerly sought by artists and illustrators. Her likeness has appeared on the covers of numerous magazines. Miss Palmer is a canine enthusiast and possesses one of the most valuable kennels on the coast. "Her Second Chance" is an adaptation of the popular Mrs. Wilson Woodrow novel of the same name.

Looking Ahead

TWO-A-DAY RECLAIMS WHEELERS

A real dyed-in-the-wool vaudevillian really never deserts the two-a-day programs. They may alternate between vaudeville and revues but they really call them selves vaude villians. Betty and Bert Wheeler, who have been in vaudeville for many years, but like many other have come into revues, have returned to the Keith-Albee circuit and will appear at B. F. Keith's for the new week.

Betty Wheeler

"A desertion from vaudeville is a diversion for us," said Betty. "And it makes our act go better when we come back. Our two seasons in the Follies were not very hard but vaudeville audiences are easier to play than those hardened Follies patrons, some of whom have seen the show night after night and who either sit there bored or else they fall asleep."

Betty, who formerly dressed very elaborately and took great care in designing her own costumes, has come in for the simple forms of dress but it does not detract any from her charm and cuteness.

FIRST RUNS FOR NEW WEEK

LOEW'S STATE—Marion Davies in "Beverly of Graustark," adapted from the novel by George Barr McCutcheon. A romantic drama with a colorful locale in a modern European Kingdom. A dual role for the star. Also in the cast are Antonio Moreno, Creighton Hale, Roy D'Arcy and Paulette Duval. Sidney Franklin directed. A Cosmopolitan production released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Also stage presentations.

METROPOLITAN—(Starting tomorrow) Norma Talmadge in "Kiki," adapted from the Belasco play by Andre Picard. A human interest story of a little Parisian "spitfire" who aspired to become a lady. Also in the cast are Ronald Colman and Marc McDermott. Clarence Brown directed. A First National picture. On the stage, Gus Edwards' "Kids in Kandyland" revue.

NEW BOSTON—"The Beautiful Cheat," adapted from the Nina Wilcox Putnam story, "Doubling for Cupid." A tale of a shop girl who became a movie star. Laura LaPlante is starred. Included in the cast are Harry Myers and Alexander Carr. Edward Sloman directed. A Universal picture. Also vaudeville.

OLYMPIA—(Starting tomorrow) "Her Second Chance," adapted from the novel by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow. A comedy drama of the Kentucky turf. Anna Q. Nilsson is starred with Huntley Gordon, and Charlie Murray in support. Lambert Hillyer directed. A First National picture. Also vaudeville.

ST. JAMES—"Hell's Four Hundred," adapted from the novel, "The Just and the Unjust" by Vaughan Kester. The story of a "gold-digger." In the cast are Margaret Livingston and Wallace McDonald. John Griffith Wray directed. A William Fox picture. Also vaudeville.

ORPHEUM—"Monte Carlo," a comedy drama of the sporting life. Gertrude Olmstead and Zasu Pitts are featured. Charis Cahanne directed. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture. Also vaudeville.

FENWAY—(Starting today) "The Runaway," adapted from Charles Neville Buck's story, "The Fight to the Hills." A tale of a movie actress in the Kentucky mountains. Clara Bow and Warner Baxter are featured. William DeMille directed. A Paramount picture. Also "The Gilded Highway," with Dorothy Devore. J. Stuart Blackton directed. A Warner Brothers' picture.

CIGAR STRIKERS IN PARADE TO FANEUIL HALL

Some 1,200 of the 1,500 striking cigar makers, members of Local 97, Cigar Makers' Union, will parade tomorrow from Berkeley and Appleton streets to Faneuil Hall, where a mass meeting and demonstration of affiliated unions of the A. F. of L. will take place.

Thomas F. Green, president of Local 97, will be marshal of the parade, and has appointed as one of his aides Miss Mary Hewett, a "stripper," and member of the strike committee.

The cigarmakers will assemble at 1:45, and, headed by their own band, will march through the city to Faneuil Hall, where other labor organizations will gather for the demonstration at 3 o'clock. One division of the parading cigarmakers will carry signs and placards, setting forth a history of conditions in the union since the wage cut in 1922 to the present.

Although conferences were held with one or two representatives of manufacturers, the situation remained unchanged today. The Big Four manufacturers, namely, the "I. A." "Elcho," "M. C. A." and "Harvard and Pipeline," have refused to accede to the demands of the strikers.

CAPTAIN ENDS LIFE ABOARD SCHOONER

Shelburne, N. S., April 10 (A.P.).—Captain Alden Geele, master of the Gloucester fishing schooner Thomas F. Gordon, was found dead in his cabin today with a bullet wound in his head and a revolver on the floor beside him. He formerly was fishing skipper of the Gloucester schooner Columbia, which competed in the unfinished sailing match of 1923 with the Canadian schooner Bluenose.

Gloucester, April 10 (A.P.).—Captain Alden Geele, who committed suicide on board his schooner at Shelburne, N. S., was a recognized leader among the fishing captains of Gloucester. For 18 years he was skipper of vessels for the Gorton-Pew fishing interests.

HOUGH'S $77,500 BONDS PAID BY SURETY FIRM

Concord, N. H., April 10 (A.P.).—Payment in full of bonds amounting to $77,500 settled out of court the suit of Bank Commissioner Arthur E. Dole against the Aetna Casualty and Surety Company, bonding company for Arthur H. Hough, former treasurer of the Peoples Trust Company of Lebanon, who was sentenced to ten years in State's Prison for misappropriation of funds.

Pastor to Base Sermon on Hearst Editorial

So deep an impression did the editorial by William Randolph Hearst, advocating practical application of Christianity as a crime wave cure, make upon the Rev. F. Fasano, pastor of the West End Baptist Church, that he will incorporate it in his sermon tomorrow, he declared today.

Rev. F. Fasano

The Sunday service will be called "The Hearst Practical Christianity Service."

"I read that editorial in the Boston Evening American by Mr. Hearst," said the minister. "It gave me many ideas for a sermon. It is what I have been trying, for three years in other church relations before coming here to No. 38 Chambers street, to make evident.

"I'm going to make my people think about it as the best expression of practical Christianity that I know of.

"What I like about it, is that this statement comes from a layman. That's why I am using so much of it in a sermon, because it is bound to start people thinking."

Dr. Fasano has been with the Boston Bethel City Missionary Society for three years and has carried on religious and educational work in East Boston, East Cambridge and the West End. He is a graduate of the University of Baltimore and Gordon College, Boston.

Miss Erdine Maddock

Miss Erdine Maddock will be the soloist at the service.

"I Have Destroyed the Mafia of Sicily"

By Benito Mussolini

"A year ago the Fascist Government undertook to rid Sicily of brigands. We have hunted the Mafia and rounded up no less than 10,000 of these despicable persons who had turned Sicily into a hell." A most interesting description of the success of posting notice for all bandits to give themselves up to justice.

Japan Menaces U. S. Islands, Says Colonel Mitchell

Another step in the aerial war plans of Asiatic powers against the United States is startlingly outlined by Colonel William Mitchell, former Assistant Chief of the U. S. Army Air Service, in the accompanying article. This is the third article of a notable series prepared for the Hearst newspapers, in which Colonel Mitchell, for the information of the American people, is presenting his views on the air requirements of the United States.

Secretary David F. Houston's Private Estimate of President Wilson

Secretary David F. Houston allows himself the perilous pleasure of forming an estimate of the chief under whom he served so long. He admits that it is "risky for any one to essay to analyze Woodrow Wilson and to picture what manner of man he was," but he braves the risk. "Wilson," he says, "was a dyed-in-the-wool Scotch Presbyterian, a Scotch Presbyterian Christian with all that that implies—in philosophy, ethics, morals, standards of conduct and practices."

Napoleon promptly took charge.

MUSSOLINI has many of Napoleon's qualities, including unlimited self-confidence and courage, and his ideas are as big as Napoleon's. The latter planned, after finishing with Europe, to adopt Mohammed's religion, make himself ruler of all Asia, as well as of Europe, and call it a complete job. England planned otherwise.

NAPOLEON had the energy, man-power and wealth of France to work with, and did not have to oppose him, as Mussolini has, the educated, radical thinking masses of today.

Will Mussolini, now starting his imperial program, be able to do with modern Italy and modern Italians what Napoleon did one hundred and twenty years ago with France and Frenchmen?

THREE POOR old scrubwomen in a New York hotel gave "a party" with modern bootleg whiskey. They were found yesterday morning, one dead with her skull broken, one unconscious, the third walking up and down out of her mind, and the walls were stained with blood. The two survivors said that "so far as they knew" there had been no quarrel.

THE QUESTION is, will those who sold the bootleg whiskey, causing one death, go to jail for twenty years, pay a small fine, or go free? It would not be hard to learn where those poor women got the whiskey.

HIGH WAGES are doubly useful. They make the masses happier, they make the classes think. "Masses" and "classes" are words offensive to our democratic ears. Nevertheless, we HAVE masses with little money, and classes with much money.

THAT HIGH wages make people think is proved by New York's Interborough Street Car Company. You can't hire men for $2.50 a day now, so science uses its brain, invents turpatiles and a "multiple door control," thus saving $4,000,000 a year.

When strikes and child labor laws freed the coal mine "breaker boys" from the job of picking sharp slate out of the coal, the mine owners made the steel fingers of machinery do the work.

YOU READ John D. Rockefeller, Jr.'s, letter to King Fuad I of Egypt. "I should count it a privilege to make a gift of ten million dollars," said Mr. Rockefeller, and told how he would like Egypt to use the money.

When the ancient king of Persia heard that his fleet had been destroyed by the Greeks, he said to the servant at his table, "Remind me some day to destroy Greece."

King Fuad probably said to his "royal remembrancer," "Remind me to go over to America to find out how much MORE money that Mr. Rockefeller has."

MARION DAVIES in "BEVERLY of GRAUSTARK"

The Girl Who Played a Prince!

Marion Davies never had a greater role than this. Comedy, romance and adventure are combined to a degree not even approached by "Little Old New York" or "Lights of Old Broadway."

A laugh—and a thrill—of a lifetime is this amazing story of a fascinating American girl who disguised herself as a boyish prince to save the toppling throne of a quaint little kingdom.

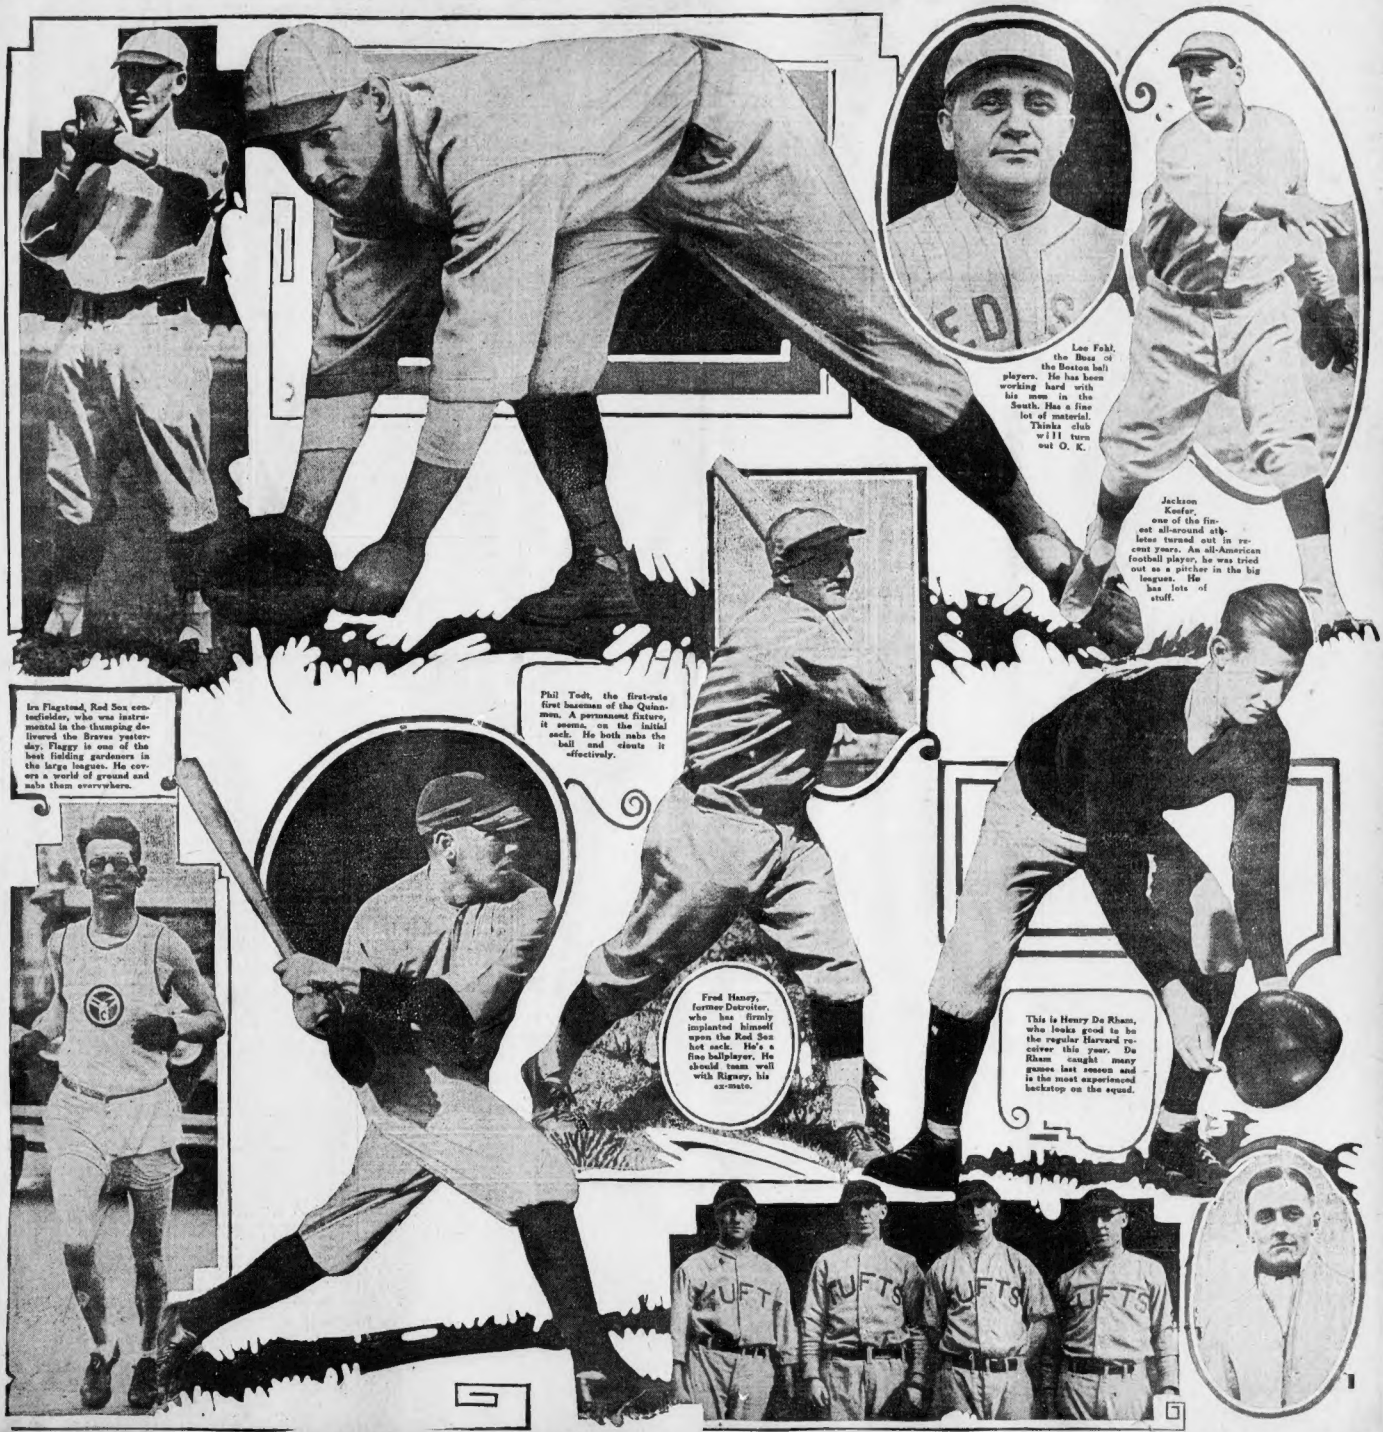
SPORT ACTION TRANSFERS TO DIAMOND AND CINDERS



Lee Fohl, the Boss of the Boston ball players. He has been working hard with his men in the South. Has a fine lot of material. Thinks club will turn out O. K.

Jackson Keefer, one of the finest all-around athletes turned out in recent years. An all-American football player, he was tried out as a pitcher in the big leagues. He has lots of stuff.

Ira Flagstead, Red Sox centerfielder, who was instrumental in the thumping delivered the Braves yesterday. Flaggy is one of the best fielding gardeners in the large leagues. He covers a world of ground and nabs them everywhere.

Phil Todt, the first-rate first baseman of the Quinnmen. A permanent fixture, it seems, on the initial sack. He both nabs the ball and clouts it effectively.

Fred Haney, former Detroiter, who has firmly implanted himself upon the Red Sox hot sack. He's a fine ballplayer. He should team well with Rigney, his ex-mate.

This is Henry De Rham, who looks good to be the regular Harvard receiver this year. De Rham caught many games last season and is the most experienced backstop on the squad.

Chuck Mellor, winner of last year's B. A. A. Marathon run. The Unicorns are awaiting his entry for the Patriots' Day event. Mellor will undoubtedly appear to defend his title.

Irving "Bey" Watson, right fielder on the Somerville High School nine, is one of the many schoolboy stars who are now disporting about the diamond. In this fine action picture Watson certainly looks as if he had clouted one far at least three bases.

A quartet of promising Tufts ballplayers who hope to bring lots of bacon home to the Medford college this season. They are, left to right: Dormbaum, a catcher; Strathdee, regular second sacker; Burgess, another backstop, and Liston, who patrols one of the outer gardens.

F. S. Melland, who captains the Oxford-Cambridge lacrosse team, which is at present touring this country. It has played several Eastern colleges already.

The amateur open boxing meet under the auspices of the Buffalo Social and Athletic Club in Lawrence comes on April 12.

B. A. A. MARATHON GRIND ATTRACTS BIG FIELD

65 TO RUN IN ANNUAL ROAD RACE

Entries for the Patriots' Day Classic Continue to Pour Into Headquarters

Sixty-five men have now signified their intentions of competing in the B. A. A. Marathon on Patriots' Day.

The new arrivals are James J. White of the Saints Peter and Paul A. C. of South Boston, Demetrios Costopoulos of Lowell, Frank Giblin of the Blue Banner Club of Worcester and Raymond J. Beck of Dorchester.

Although reports are in circulation that Chuck Mellor, last year's victor, and the diminutive Percy Wyer of the Monarch A. C. of Toronto plan to exclude the Hub event from their program in order to be fit for the national title run from Laurel to Baltimore on May 15, no word of their decision has as yet reached Manager Kanaly of the B. A. A.

These reports have caused some anxiety as to whether the Maryland run will affect the Unicorn classic to any extent. It is highly improbable that it will. Most of the runners are in good enough condition to negotiate both if they so desire, and the month which will elapse between them should be ample time for any recuperation which may be necessary after the Patriots' Day grind.

Suggs is Signed for Five Bouts

Chick Suggs, New Bedford bantamweight, has one of those nothing to do until tomorrow jobs.

Dave Luminasky has Suggs battling Jackie Gordon in New York tonight. On April 15 Suggs tackles Nick Mercer at Lowell, on April 19 he mingles with Phil Vardi at New Bedford, while on April 26 he will tackle Harry Gordon at Fall River.

There is also a Suggs-Fuller bout in the making.

Suggs usually celebrates Labor Day by battling in the afternoon and again the evening. It is suggested that he introduce a third to allow him to box on Sundays so that he may keep his hand in at the fistic game all week.

Since January 12 Suggs has engaged in twelve bouts.

MANY MARKS GO IN SWIM MEET

Chicago, April 10.—Agnes Geraghty of New York set a new mark of 3 minutes 22 4-5 seconds for a new International Women's 220-yard breast stroke record. It was her fourth world's record during the National A. A. U. championship swims. The previous record was her own time of 3 minutes 24 seconds.

Eric Rademasher, German swimmer, created a new time when he splashed 400 yards, breaststroke, in 5 minutes 36 4-5 seconds.

The national amateur title for the 500-yard free style swim was won by Arne D. Borg of the Illinois A. C. He made the distance in 5 minutes 42 2-5 seconds.

Walter Spence of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. proved to a new world's record for the 200-yard breaststroke in 2 minutes 29 3-5 seconds. He clipped more than two seconds from the indoor title previously held by Robert Skelton of the Illinois A. C.

The 150-yard backstroke championship was retained by Walter Laufer of the Cincinnati Y. M. C. A. team.

BOXER TO FILE $50,000 SUIT AGAINST RING SOLON

Chicago, April 10.—Doc Snell, Tacoma, Wash., featherweight title challenger, through his representative, W. E. Miller, will file suit for $50,000 against Chairman Ed Barry of the Cleveland Boxing Commission for alleged defamation of character.

The suit will be based on statements credited to Barry, who refused to sanction a bout between Snell and Eddie Shea, at Cleveland April 21 because, he said, Snell "faked" a fight with Bud Taylor in Cleveland March 26.

SOCCER TEAMS AWAIT BATTLE FOR SUPREMACY

New York, April 10 (A.P.).—Two professional soccer teams of power the Bethlehem Steel eleven of Bethlehem, Pa., and the Ben Millers of St. Louis, meet here tomorrow for the national championship.

The finals of the cup to play always have produced interesting soccer with never a "rout" in the eleven years of their history. There have been only two ties and on five occasions victorious were scored by shutouts. The Bethlehem team saw that three opponents went scoreless in the championships.

FOUR OF THE FOREMOST PLUTOCRATS IN THE ATHLETIC WORLD

SUZANNE LENGLEN
It may be too early to call Suzanne a plutocrat, but Promoter Pickens' offer of $250,000 for her to turn pro, at least places her in the class of the aristocrats.

BABE RUTH
Whose earnings at the national pastime have been in the neighborhood of $600,000. Proving that it pays to be facile in the art of pushing baseballs over distant fences. The Bambino has spent more than many professional men earn.

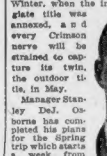
JACK DEMPSEY
The Rockefeller of Sportdom. Smacking home runs may be profitable, but smacking other people's chins is more so. The gentle art of constructing cauliflower ears is a paying proposition.

RED GRANGE
Who introduced wholesale business methods to football. He was paid for his all-American ability, but in his own words, he paid for the privilege at the hands of the publicity hounds.

SOUTHERN TRIP FOR HARVARD TRACK SQUAD

By STED CHANDLER.

Harvard is taking track in earnest. The sport was given big impetus by the victory of Eddie Farrell's crack outfit in New York last Winter, when the indoor intercollegiate title was annexed, and it did every Crimson nerve will be strained to capture its twin, the outdoor title, in May.



Sted Chandler

Manager Stanley DeJ. Osborne has completed his plans for the spring trip which starts a week from Sunday, the eighteenth. The jaunt will take the squad to Williamsburg, Va., where the men will train twice a day and will hold a meet with William and Mary, the institution which will act as host to the northerners.

Immediately upon the return home intensive work will commence for the all-important intercollegiates. Although the Harvard outfit is known to possess both strength and balance, the test in May will be much more severe than was the board-track contest last March. The invaders from the Coast will take a lot of beating, and if Harvard contains any with a second title there should be a plume for Eddie Farrell's hat, and for the lot of every man jack on his squad.

MUCH INTEREST IN MEET.

The greatest interest is attached to this meet which will assuredly bring out the toughest sort of competition. It has been, and will be a mammoth year for track and field athletics, and the East finds itself about to enjoy to the full the performances of the cream of the track world from coast to coast.

And the West Coast is good. Don't forget it. The teams representing the universities of California and Southern California and Leland Stanford, which will all be seen in action in Cambridge this Spring, have enough up their sleeves, or would have it runners were sleeves to make, as Eastern stars flirt and hanker for their laurels.

BARBER IN THE CENTURY.

In the 100-yard dash Barber (Cal.) and House (U. S. C.) have both traversed the distance in 9 9-10 seconds. The latter has negotiated the 220 in 21 7-10 seconds, while Miller (Stanford) has reached 46 8-10 in the quarter-mile.

In the half Boyden (Cal.) has done 1 minute 55 2-5, while Richardson (Stanford) is only two-tenths of a second slower. The mile run (U. S. C.) has run in 4 minutes 27 seconds, with Kerr, (Stanford) not far behind. Fox (Cal.) has traveled two miles in 10 minutes and 1 second.

The 120 dash is overrun with high caliber hurdlers. U. S. C. alone having a quartet equal to the best. In the highs Dye (U. S. C.) only takes 14 3-5 seconds, while West (Stanford) and Brumbley (U. S. C.) top the low timbers in 24.3 seconds. Other stars are Leistner, Steves and Kaer. Nichols of Stanford, a real star, is out with a broken arm, or would surely be heard from.

Reynolds (U. S. C.) can broad jump 23 feet 1½ inches. Hampton (Cal.) and Work (Stanford) are good for better than 6 feet in the high jump. In the javelin, Wood (U. S. C.) made the prod 186 feet 3½ inches.

Thus, there are the two superstars, Bud Houser and Lee Barnes of U. S. C. Houser puts the shot more than 50 feet and hurls the discus nearly 150. Barnes, Olympic pole vault champion, ranks next to Charlie Hoff at the art of casting one's carcass over a bar, and holds a record of 14 feet 2½ inches.

YALE HAS WON TITLES IN FOUR SPORTS

New York, April 10 (A.P.)—By making a strong finish Yale's athletic army has captured the bulk of Eastern Intercollegiate honors for the 1925-26 indoor season. It is the second straight season of indoor supremacy for the Bulldog. With titles in four of the ten major branches of competition in his possession, his grip on the top is even firmer than a year ago.

Yale's closing victories in the fencing and polo tournaments enables the Elis to pull away from all rivals in the final drive. Besides these triumphs, Yale carried off the intercollegiate league titles in swimming and water polo.

Harvard, providing one of the sensation of the carnaden with a comeback that netted the Crimson's forces two titles, finished as runner-up to the Elis, while the other four championships were divided among Cornell, Pennsylvania, the Naval Acad emy and Columbia.

The championship list follows:

Event.	1924-25.	1925-26
Basketball	Princeton	Columbia
Rowing	Navy	Yale
Track racing	Navy	Yale
Gymnastics	Yale	Pennsylvania
Hockey	Yale	Harvard
Boxing	Yale	Yale
Swimming	Yale, Navy	Yale
Track	Georgetown	Harvard
Water polo	Yale	Yale
Wrestling	Penn State	Cornell

CHARLEY HOFF VAULTS TO NEW WORLD MARK

Chicago, April 10 (A.P.).—Charley Hoff, Norwegian star again has demonstrated his ability to break the world's pole vault record, apparently at will.

The slender son of the Fjords cleared the bar here last night at 13 feet 8¼ inches, adding three-quarters of an inch to his previous high mark. It was the seventh time he had broken the record for a total of more than eight inches in his indoor track season, now concluded.

Harvard Notes

Howie Burns, the Dorchester speedboy, continues to eclipse the other outergardeners on Fred Mitchell's varsity nine. Burns in a recent practice game was the batting star of the diamonds holders pulling down two Ira Flagstead in the pasture.

Coach Claude Davidson has one of the best Freshman outfield prospects in recent years in Tounsend Crotty from Framingham. The outergardener was a star at Goddard Seminary last year and has played considerable amateur baseball in his home town.

Everett Donaghy, the Boston Latin boy, who sports a weird batform, is the most natural ball player on the yearling nine. All pitchers have due respect for his mighty bludgeon.

Fred Parent, the new Harvard assistant baseball coach, is getting a good line on his second team candidates and will start work shortly when Fred Mitchell swings the axe on his large varsity squad. Until that time Parent will act as assistant in the Freshman as well as the varsity practices.

Washington Crew Looms as Victor Over Easterners

NEW YORK, April 10 (I.N.S.).—It was generally felt in rowing circles today that Washington's six-length victory over California in their annual regatta yesterday presaged a victory over the Eastern field at Poughkeepsie this year.

The huskies are looked upon here as natural winners of the event, barring accidents, their veteran crew looming up as a more formidable product than anything this section is likely to develop.

Terriers to Train at Charlesbank

Boston University's track team will again use Charlesbank this season for its outdoor work, the athletic authorities have announced. At first, it was thought that the City of Boston Park Department would be unable to allow the Terrier team the use of Charlesbank and Franklin Field would have to be substituted.

Coach Burns will choose his relay quartet for the Penn Relays April 23 and 24 soon. At last year's carnival the Terriers won a fine victory in their class. This year with a stronger team, Coach Burns hopes to do still better.

SUZANNE WANTS ANOTHER TILT WITH HELEN

Paris, April 10 (I.N.S.).—Mlle. Lenglen is anxious for another match with Helen Wills at the earliest possible date, according to William Pickens, who has been negotiating a motion picture contract with Suzanne.

"I have been making some preliminary negotiations with Mlle. Lenglen with a view to a possible match with Miss Wills in California at New Year's for the benefit of charity," said Pickens. "I told her that she probably wouldn't meet Miss Wills before that date.

"I certainly expect to meet Miss Wills as soon as possible and am confident of victory," Suzanne told me. "I expect to meet her in Paris in May, according to my present plans," she added."

"That is the best news I have heard in a long time," said Miss Wills when informed of Pickens' statement. "I am anxious to remeet Suzanne and am confident it will be a good match."

Swim Meet Off

The dual swimming meet between the Metropolitan Swimming Club and the Posse Nissen School, scheduled for Monday night, April 12, at the Somerville Y. M. C. A., has been cancelled.

Fugazy Scores Over Rickard War Now Rages

New York, April 10 (A.P.)—Humbert Fugazy has won the first skirmish among New York boxing promoters in the battle for programs for the outdoor season.

Rumors that he had drawn Jack Delaney away from Tex Rickard proved well founded when yesterday Pete Reilly, Delaney's manager, signed for a contest at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, May 26, between the French-Canadian and Ad Stone of Pennsylvania.

This development indicates that the proposed third meeting between Delaney and Paul Berlenbach will be postponed to some time in September.

TO STAGE RING CARNIVAL CROSSCUP-PISHON POST

An outdoor boxing carnival, the second of its kind arranged by the Crosscup-Pishon Post, 281—the advertising men's post—of the American Legion, will take place the first week in June.

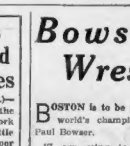
At a luncheon at the Boston City Club it was decided to spend $10,000 in preparing for the carnival, the receipts to be used for the benefit of the post headquarters.

Bowser Plans Title Wrestling Tourney

By JACK CONWAY

BOSTON is to be the scene of a series of wrestling bouts to decide the world's championship, according to a statement made today by Paul Bowser.

"I am going to clear up the wrestling situation and show which grappler is the class of the heavyweight division," declared Bowser today upon his return from New York where he held conferences with representatives of most of the leading mat men. "The public wants to know who is the real champion," continued Bowser, "and I intend to help the fans solve this problem.



Jack Conway

"I consider Joe Malsewicz, Strangler Lewis, Wayne (Big) Munn, Joe Stecher and Ned McGuire the world's leading mat men. I am going to attempt to arrange a series of contests between these men. The winner of such a tournament will have the right to call himself heavyweight champion.

"The first bout will be staged at the Arena on next Thursday night when Strangler Lewis tackles Big Munn. I always thought Lewis was unbeatable up to the time he clashed with Munn at Kansas City a year ago last January. In that contest, Munn picked Lewis up as though he were a child and tossed him out of the ring.

"Munn is six feet six inches tall and weighs 250 pounds. He is one of the finest looking athletes I have ever seen. As Lewis is getting along in years, I would not be surprised to see Wayne toss the Strangler again.

"I would like to pit the winner of the Lewis-Munn frolic against either Stecher or Malcewicz. By an eliminating process we would eventually determine who was the real boss of the heavyweights.

"Wrestling has been attracting large crowds in Boston this year and I believe that I can outbid the New York and Kansas City promoters for the big matches."

THE amateur punch flingers will once more blaze along the trail to fame at a show to be staged by the St. Joseph's T. A. Society at Commercial Hall, Bowdoin sq. tonight. Father Bill Cuddy informs us that there will be 20 bouts.

The classes listed are 118, 118, 126, 135, 147 and 160 pounds and heavyweight division. There have been several entries in the heavyweight class and the big fellows should furnish the fans with a flock of action.

Every boxing manager in the country is trying to develop a new heavyweight sensation. With Jack Dempsey paying the toll of easy living, the young business men of the cauliflower industry figure this is an opportune time to step to the front with a heavyweight contender. Jim Corbett, though, is one of the few heavyweights of prominence to get his start in the amateurs. Most of our heavyweight kings have started hoking as professionals. They began fighting because they needed money to buy food. And hungry fighters make the best scrappers the world over.

LYNN is all steamed up over the socking duel between Lou Bogash and Pal Reet which will be held at the Casino A. C. on next Monday night. There isn't anything fancy about either Reed or Bogash. They are what Jack London used to like to term two-fisted fighting men.

Bogash, according to Manager Eddie Mack, has been promised a bout with Tiger Flowers in the event he puts the skids under Reed. As Pal is a very rugged citizen, he may upset Bogash's plans.

JACK SHARKEY, New England heavyweight champion, has established training quarters at Kelley & Hayes' gym where he has started to condition himself for his title quarrel with Pat McCarthy, which will be conducted by the Boston Arena Club on the night of April 16. Sharkey realizes that McCarthy is his most serious rival in New England and he wants to be in the best of condition when he tackles the Roxbury puncher.

Dartmouth Notes

During the vacation a tractor steam shovel attached to a tractor has been at work at Harwood on the Davis Field House. The building will be 300 feet long by 200 feet wide and will contain eight cages for the varsity teams, including shower, motor room, and dormitories for visiting teams, and an underground passage to the field. It will be ready for use next Fall.

The gym team had a very successful season, and it is the opinion of the coach, Pat Keary, that this year's team is the best he has ever possessed. Defensive points to a more successful term for next season, since only two men will be lost by graduation, Smith and Yaffe, both consistent stars in the meet. The most material in this year's freshman class which will become varsity material next year.

The case of George Yaffe of the gym team who graduates this June is worthy of note. During his first year he was a sloucher on Mal Hamilton's swimming team. He became interested in the gym work and is one of the best tumblers in this year's team having captured several first places in different meets. Since he took up gym work he swashed 185 pounds and he has come down to 156 pounds under the instruction of Pat Kaney.

The baseball season does not open here until April 24, when the team meets the University of New Hampshire. Before that time Dartmouth will meet Holy Cross at Worcester and Springfield at Springfield, on April 10 and 20 respectively.

Batting statistics of the recent northern trip of Ice Green nine seem to show that the boys haven't got their eye on the ball as yet. Only three men are hitting over three hundred, Elliot, left fielder, who played in seven games, and Carney and Van Riper, pitchers, who played only three and two games. Jim Hyland, captain of next season's baseball team, and catcher is hitting .278.

PROVIDE FOR PLEASURE IN BUDGET

Boston Evening American Offers Aid to Housewives in Planning Expenditures of Income

By KATHERINE BROOKS and MARTHA LEE

NUMBER TWENTY THREE

"Mum, do you s'pose Budget would let me go to the movies?"

"I don't know, Son—come and we'll find out."

The little daily account book showed that Sonny had not been to the movies for a week. "Budget" showed there was a little change left in the "personal" fund.

"Budget says yes. Here's your quarter. Come right home afterwards."

And Sonny departed, satisfied that Budget was the best friend he had.

He didn't always think so, of course. For sometimes Budget said "No." But one thing never failed. Budget's word was final with Sonny. He argued with Father and Mother but he never argued with Budget. If it said no, that settled it.

That was because from babyhood he had been led to regard Budget as a personality like Santa Claus and Mother talking about it, and if Budget said "No" to him that was save in. If Father and Mother gave in, of course, he had to. When Johnny's mother across the street said "No," Johnny would demand, "Why?"

And his mother would argue and argue, and still Johnny would pout and rebel. That was because in Johnny's family there was no great, big final authority, like Budget to settle the question once and for all.

In Sonny's house Budget was a great help to family discipline, as well as to family finances.

To make a satisfactory budget, let all the family into the game. The children will enjoy it and it will teach them habits of thrift and good management that will be an asset to them in later life.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Home Budget Editor—My weekly income is $40, three in family. Rent $18 without heat; insurance $4.65, cooperative bank $5, and a debt of $18 a month. Will you please suggest a budget plan whereby we can save a little each week?

Mrs. H. L. G.

Gladys! You are already saving through insurance and the cooperative bank. Your debt comes to $4.18 a week, insurance $4.65, cooperative bank $5, savings bank $10, savings bank $3, rent $11.54, food $9.56, clothing $6.65, operating $5, personal $4. Your rent is high. When your debt is paid, allow more for clothing and personal.

Home Budget Editor—Kindly send me a budget form. My income is $30 a week; rent $28 a month, and we owe a bill of $40. Electric light, gas and telephone are $9 a month.

D. G. P.

Try to save $4 a week including payments on your bill. Shelter comes to $8.77 a week, food $8, clothing $4, operating $3.60, personal $3.75.

Home Budget Editor—We are eight in the family, with six children. I get $38 a week and pay $28 rent, $6 for gas and food, and can hardly get any clothes for the children. I pay $2.50 weekly for insurance, $1.20 for milk, $4.50 monthly insurance, Christmas club $2.

MRS. K. E.

If you feed your family on the figures you have given me, you are doing wonderfully. Your monthly insurance (all insurance is saving) comes to 35 cents a week. Your rent is rather high. I shall outline a budget with more food allowance: Savings, $4.86 (what you are actually saving); shelter, $8.77; food (including milk bill), $9.36, clothing, $8; operating, $3, personal, $-12.

Mrs. H. G.—Since you wrote your letter several budgets have been given for $50 a week. A sheet has been sent you.

Mrs. H. J. M.—Without knowing what your rent is, I cannot tell you how well you are managing, but I do think you are wise to live in the country, especially with young children. Your husband's carfares to Boston amount to only $4.44 a week, which is probably offset by much lower rent. Try the budget sheet I am sending you. I hope it helps.

Mrs. F. F. G.—Your chief trouble seems to be food and clothes. It is a problem, with seven little ones to feed on $30 a week. But I think you are managing well, especially on rent and fuel. Try this budget: Saving, $2.60 (your insurance), shelter, $5.30; food, $12.60 (including milk); clothing, $4.50; operating, $2.10; old bills, $3. This does not allow you anything for recreation, but that will come after your bills are paid. Good luck!

Mrs. F. J.—Your figures were not quite clear, but $76 a month is high for your rent, out of $224 and with three children to feed, unless the rent includes heat. A form is being sent you.

Home Budget Editor—Will you kindly outline a budget for $70 a week, three in family?

G. M. S.

You have a wide range of choices, with as comfortable an income, and may want to change these figures. Saving, $10; shelter (heated), $20; food, $11; clothing, $15; operating, $6; personal, $8. If your rent does not include heat, pay less and heat out of "operating."

M. A. S.—With $28 a week, two in family and no debts, try this budget: saving, $2; shelter, $5.50; food, $9; clothing, $4; operating, $4.50; personal, $3.

The Making of a Husband, Ann Lisle's Clever Serial

By Ann Lisle

AND then I realized that the day of reckoning for Pat and Jeanie had come, and that Jim and I must pay our share of the toll.

"Jeanie's upstairs asleep," I said to Pat, with all the quietness I could muster.

And that procession I saw leaving here?" Pat demanded, with an intensity that was almost funny.

"Was Dr. Willis superintending while Tarasov, the Cossack, and Bertie Lingard, the Englishman, pulled the sedge on which they had placed Nicholas Perry," I said.

"And the woman walking behind?"

"Was Arlette Valleau, Nicholas Perry's model and household helper," I replied categorically.

Pat drew a long explosive breath. He clutched my arm and drew me back into the shadows of the hall as he whispered:

"Jeanie knows. Lucie Tremaine told her."

I did not pretend to misunderstand, but instead I asked quietly:

"Did Lucie confess that to you?"

"Johnny fetched her to my office and made her tell me. Johnny said he'd have made trouble for Lucie with her new husband—Matt Hawley if she hadn't done her best to straighten out the trouble she had made for me. So after all the sacrifices Jim made Jeanie knows that I am the man with whom Brooke was infatuated—the man because of whom that insane Basil killed Brooke. Jeanie knows—"

"Hush!" I ordered. "What's the use of going over all that again? Yes, Jeanie knows. She has been through a lot to find herself again. She has suffered. She was jealous—resentful—"

"Jeanie told me once—the other time when she forgave me—that she wouldn't forgive twice—that she wouldn't overlook a second wrong doing," Pat said brokenly. "And Jim tried to hide the truth from her. She knew. She was busy amusing herself by teasing me with that poor Perry. And now she has fainted—"

"Jeanie fooled with Perry to amuse herself not to make advances on you. I laughed. 'And you got a lot of fun out of showing you what a charming wife you had —even though you might occasionally fall to appreciate her. Then she heard about Brooke and got desperate. The rest she will tell you. But remember that if you don't like what you hear you deserve worse than that—"

"You mean she cares for Perry—" Pat flung out, digging his fingers into my wrist most unpleasantly.

"You might come up here and ask me," Jeanie's voice lilted from the top of the stairs.

"Jeanie!" Pat shouted as if he thought her too good to be true.

He took the stairs three steps at a time, so that I was still in the hall when he reached Jeanie's door and caught her in his arms. Before I could turn my fascinated eyes away, I saw how eagerly Jeanie went to Pat, how tenderly he held her and I heard him cry:

"I've been a fool. Nothing can take you away from me now—or ever."

I sighed and went into the living room where Jim was sitting in the twilight.

"Jeanie upstairs with Jeanie," I said quietly.

"I suppose there will be a fine rumpus," Jim said with a sigh.

"They've kissed and made up," I said quietly.

"Quit your kidding! How do you know?" Jim demanded.

"I saw them—"

"Saw the clinch? Likely story! As if they'd let you in on that," scoffed Jim. "As if they'd make up without a lot of explaining!"

Another Advantage of Electric Refrigeration

Even Temperature Protects Health

INSTEAD of "up again-down again" as the supply of ice melts away or is replenished, with electric refrigeration the temperature of your food remains evenly under 50 degrees, day in and day out.

This is truly important. Science teaches foods must be kept at such temperature to retain nutrition. Deterioration begins at 55 degrees. Dry even temperature under 50 degrees also eliminates the unpleasantness of the flavor or odor of one food permeating another.

There are scores of other advantages of this modern convenience, learn them. Read the electric Refrigeration advertisements in the Boston Evening American and the Daily Advertiser.

Spring Tonics

GREETINGS, everybody!

Feeling a bit lazy these days?

Lack ambition? Appetite not up to scratch? These signs of "Spring Fever" need to be the slightest for grandmother to get out the herb tea and sulphur and treacle, but we have a pleasanter remedy today—spring vegetables in lots of quantities.

The tomato is really unique. Not only does it have the peculiar acidity and succulence of fruit, but it is rich as well in vegetable properties. And, most important of all, it contains in large proportions all the vitamines necessary to human growth and development, and is an excellent stimulant to the appetite.

Here's a way to combine the fresh vegetable with the new baby Spring onions:

TOMATOES AND ONIONS BAKED.

Fry 6 strips of bacon until crisp but not burned. Strain off the fat. Cut 8 medium sized tomatoes into quarters. Also cut 1 bunch of Spring onions into small pieces. Place in a shallow buttered baking dish, sprinkle with a scant teaspoon of salt, and pour over the bacon fat mixed with ¼ cup of boiling water. Bake uncovered until the onions are tender. Serve with the crisp bacon strips arranged on top.

Spinach can be prepared in many way more attractive than the usual plain, boiled; for instance, as a luncheon dish, with hard boiled eggs and a little left over ham:

SPINACH WITH EGGS AND HAM.

2 cups chopped, cooked spinach.
½ teaspoon salt.
¼ teaspoon pepper.
1 tablespoon butter or other shortening.
3 hard boiled eggs.
1 cup minced ham.
1 cup highly seasoned white sauce.
¼ cup grated cheese.

Season the spinach with salt and pepper and add the butter. Spread half of the spinach in a buttered baking dish, place a layer of sliced eggs, then the layer of minced ham, and then the rest of the spinach. Sprinkle the grated cheese over the top and bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) until the cheese is a rich brown.

(By the way, do you save all of your cheese trimmings and put them through your food chopper or grate them for just such dishes as these?)

And that endeth the vegetable chat for today.

'Bye till tomorrow.

The Letters of Queen Victoria

Human Appeal in Private Documents of Greatest Woman Ruler

WEIGHTED down by the dual burdens of cares of State and of her abysmal grief over the death of her Prince Consort, Queen Victoria devoted herself assiduously, nevertheless, to the loving task of providing for the lifelong happiness of her children.

Today's instalment of "The Letters of Queen Victoria," which the Boston Evening American is publishing with the approval of King George of England, finds the Queen, torn 'twixt joy and sorrow, all a-flutter over her first meeting with the fair young Princess Alexandra, of Denmark, for a betrothal of great moment to the throne of Great Britain is in the making.

Alexandra has been chosen to become the affianced of Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, his doting mother's "Bertie," who is destined to succeed her after many years as the ruler of the British Empire under the title of King Edward VII.

Queen Victoria's magnanimity of mind is revealed in her unstinted praise not only for the "lovely" Alexandra, but for all the other women of the royal Danish court.

Published by permission of His Majesty King George V. through arrangement with Longmans, Green & Co., of New York. Copyright in Canada.

"My Dear Bertie"

Queen Victoria to the Prince of Wales

Osborne 9th July, 1862

My Dear Bertie. Though I quite share your feelings that, from affection and respect to the memory of your beloved and valued General Bruce, it would be more fitting and well to appoint publicly a successor to him for some time still, I feel (and I know, because Lord Palmerston wrote so graciously to me upon the subject) that it will not do to leave it without a gentleman in that position, to whom you could apply for everything and who could exclusively belong to you.

For, though Sir Charles Phipps, General Grey and Colonel Biddulph are most kind and ready to be of use to you in every possible way, still their duties are very onerous, and they cannot devote their time exclusively to you, or you, indeed, would not like it. It equally agreeable to talk on certain matters with those, who, though most kindly devoted to you, are not to remain permanently about you.

I have ascertained that General Collys will be quite ready to undertake the office and to become your Controller and Treasurer. You are now too near twenty-one to have a Governor freshly appointed. But he will naturally be a species of mentor, for no young prince can be without a person of experience and of a certain age, who would keep him from doing what was hurtful to him or unfit his position, and who would be responsible to me, to a great extent, for what took place. He would be the person to whom you should go for advice and assistance on all occasions.

"Our Terrible Loss"

I know of no other person so well fitted as General Knollys, for possessed beloved Papa's great calm and confidence; he is very sensible, particularly pleasant and agreeable, has great experience in the world, and singular tact and temper, of which he gave such a splendid proof during his command at Aldershot. He is, besides, very fond of young people. He is, moreover, the only person I directly thought of when our terrible loss befell dear General Bruce took place. I shall see him on Saturday or Monday, and you can do so also, and then I would propose that he should come and stay with you at the Hall for some time, so that you might become quite acquainted with him, that he afterwards could attend you abroad, when you go to Brussels and join me. I feel sure that you will find it very easy to get on with General Knollys, when you come to know him. I shall therefore now, in a day or two, write confidentially to Lord Palmerston, to inform him of the choice I have made, and which I know would meet with beloved Papa's sanction and approval.

"Your Unhappy Mama"

I will, tomorrow or next day, send you a little sketch of what I think would be the best and most suitable arrangement for you, for the time between October and your marriage, which I think you would also should be early next Spring.

Ever your affectionate and unhappy Mama, V. R.

Extracts From the Queen's Journal.

LAEKEN (King Leopold's palace at Brussels), 3rd Sept., 1862.—At half past one I went down to luncheon with the girls. Princess Christian (of Denmark) presented her two daughters, Alexandra and Dagmar (afterward Empress of Russia) and Prince Christian (who became King of Denmark in 1863.) I had seen him last twenty-four years ago

Alexandra is lovely, such a beautiful refined profile, and quiet ladylike manner, which made a most favorable impression. Dagmar is quite different, with fine brown eyes. Princess Christian must have been quite good-looking. She is unfortunately very deaf. Uncle (King Leopold) soon came in, and after a rather stiff visit they all (excepting myself) went to luncheon.

Afterwards Marie B. (wife of the Duke of Brabant, King Leopold's elder son, afterward King Leopold II.), brought Prince and Princess Christian upstairs, leaving them with me

Now came the terribly trying moment for me. I had alone to say and do what, under other, former happy circumstances, had devolved on both (Queen Victoria and the late Prince Consort Albert) together. It was not without much emotion that I was able to express what I did to the Princess; my belief that they knew what we wished and hoped, which was terrible for me to say alone. I said that I trusted their dear daughter would feel, should she accept our son (Prince Albert Edward of Wales, afterward King Edward VII.) that she was doing so with her whole heart and will.

Hope for "Bertie"

They assured me that Bertie might hope she would do so, and that they trusted he also felt a real inclination, adding that they hoped God would give their dear child strength to do what she ought, and that she might be able to pour some comfort into my poor heart, that they were sure she would become quickly attached to me, and be a good wife to Bertie. I replied I would do all I could to be a real mother to her, but I feared she was entering a very sad house. Thus ended this most trying meeting.

Dined as yesterday, and afterwards Prince and Princess Christian and Princess Alexandra came upstairs. She looked lovely in a black dress, nothing in her hair, and curls on either side, which hung over her shoulders, her hair turned back off her beautiful forehead. Her whole appearance was one of the greatest charm, combined with simplicity and perfect dignity. I gave her a little piece of white heather, which Bertie gave me at Balmoral, and I told her I hoped it would bring her luck. Dear Uncle Leopold, who sat near me, was charmed with her. Very tired and felt low and agitated.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

WHILE it is still a little early, thousands of tramps are already reserving their park benches for the summer.

A HOBO makes his selection now and does his loafing there later.

A TRAMP who wants to sit down all summer has to get his parking space in advance.

ONE guy waited until May last year and the benches were all gone.

HE had to stand up for two months.

ONE tramp took up ice skating right after Christmas and sat down the rest of the Winter.

HE wasn't very considerate of his family, but he was certainly good to his feet.

HE'S starting a campaign now for softer benches.

HE wants the city to upholster them.

HOBOES in the Middle West are demanding overstuffed curbstones.

THEY think that the contractors ought to mix feathers in with the cement.

ONE tramp claims that if a bulldog doesn't rip the seat of his trousers, the concrete wears it out.

HUNDREDS of hoboes make it a practice to steal nothing but suits with two pairs of pants.

THEY don't care about socks, what they want is holeproof trousers.

TRAMPS are a nuisance, but one city keeps the hoboes away from the parks by putting soap and water on all the benches.

A CHICAGO bum committed suicide the other day. He said he was a kleptomaniac and couldn't keep from taking baths.

HE claimed he'd rather die than have the other tramps think he was getting Ritzy.

SOMETHING ought to be done. Our parks are filled with so many tramps in the Summer, that the working people have to buy their benches from speculators.

DAILY SHORT STORY

CINDERELLA'S STOCKING

By Florence E. McIntyre

HER name wasn't Cinderella, really. But the neighbors called her that because Rosie Jensen came from an institution and worked for Miss Crawford, a woman as mean as either of Cinderella's sisters. Then, too, she did all the scullery work in Miss Crawford's big house. A regular servant cost too much, so the prosperous spinster managed things nicely, with Rosie, just to help.

But Rosie did not mind her lot, hard as it was. Even the empty house seemed home beside the orphanage which had swallowed her for twelve years. She had time off every Wednesday and Saturday; it was such fun doing the shopping, all by herself.

Some Day

Some day, she reasoned, Prince Charming would come dashing up, in a motor car, maybe, then, she would be a great lady in a house of her own. Perhaps she would meet this fanciful magician at the church dance next week. Who could tell? Anyway, the coral pink frock, created from a length of stuff long hidden in a Crawford trunk, was ready. She had fashioned it dauntlessly and sewed it diligently.

A child heart thrilled in anticipation of its first party. No other girl would look as nice as she! How could she? Rosie hugged the pink frock close against her slender form and reveled in its soft lace berths, its little touches at the cuffs, cuffs.

She had not intended paying $8 for the new satin slippers, but they were so pretty! Two scant dollars remained in her shabby purse, and there were stockings to be bought and a pretty handkerchief! But the next day Rosie compromised on the kerchief and spent her final two on a pair of stockings, silk of texture, French nude in tone. Would Miss Crawford sneer and say they were vulgar? Would she send her scurrying back to exchange the lowly things for a pair of sombre black?

Poor child nearly forgot to bring home the groceries—most forgot all about the bundle of things at the cleaners. She wandered from shop to shop tense in the thrill of excitement. Why, she scarcely knew what she was saying to the grocery man, because her mind was so crowded with thoughts, secret thoughts, her very own. Would any of the boys ask her to dance? Supposing they didn't? Oh, that would be too embarrassing. All dressed up and a wallflower! Well, if no one asked her, why, she'd just slip out unnoticed like Cinderella before the stroke of twelve.

It Was Gone

Rosie blushed and giggled. Wouldn't it be nice to have a beau to take her to the festival. Fancy walking in to the church hall licked on the arm of a big, tall fellow! Would he let any of the other boys dance with her, or would he drive them off with a dark look? Rosie blushed again and glanced down at the package clutched tightly against her body. She stared, her face blanched. She counted the bags and bundles. The groceries—the box from the cleaners—the little packet containing the stockings—her stockings. It was gone!

Tremblingly the girl retraced her steps and began a frantic, but a futile search. Tradesmen said she had not left any such bag upon their counters. She scraped among the litter of the gutter with the heel of her shoe. Slowly hope waned. She swallowed hard to dislodge the swelling in her throat, but when the kitchen door at Miss Crawford's banged behind her, she gave way to wracking sobs. Miss Crawford's high staccato, demanding an explanation, hammered cruelly above her head. When she learned what had happened, she said people always paid for their vanity in this world.

"Certainly not!" the mistress flayed in answer to Rosie's humble petition for a two dollar loan on next month's pay. "Throwing money away in the street like that—no friend—no head at all!"

All life's gold faded as days crept by and a young dream of a first dance vanished. The green-black cotton stockings in her drawers were out of the question. Why, they simply laughed at the loveliness of her new slippers, and screamed a protest to the pretty pink of her coral frock. Yes, she was punished for her vanity, just as Miss Crawford said!

But while this little Cinderella groveled amid the arid aches of despair in Miss Crawford's basement, a cloud slid across the early summer sky. Sunshine caught it, flecking its leaden fleece with shafts of silver light. A young man ran up the Crawford front steps. He smiled reservedly as he pulled the bell. Rosie answered his summons.

Package Returned

"Are you the young lady who lives with Miss Crawford?" he asked in grave concern.

"Yes, sir!" Rosie's eyes were wide, expectant. She liked the way the lad's brown hair curled over his forehead. She thought he had the nicest teeth, and such merry eyes!

"Well!" Apparently he did not quite know how to begin. "I believe I've got something belonging to you."

"Oh!" Rosie gasped when he handed her the unmistakable packet containing a pair of French nude silk stockings. "Thank you, then you, so much."

He tried to explain. "I found them on the street, you see. Just kept them for wanting to know what else to do with them. Today I happened to be in the grocery store. Old Sinaits was saying to a lady how badly you felt and all. That's how I found out."

"Oh, really?"

Miss Crawford called disturbingly from above stairs, but Rosie, in the spell of the visitor's gaze, held the door ajar.

"I'm Bill Brestwick, from the garage, you know. Say, are you going to the dance tomorrow night?" She nodded. "Say, couldn't I take you? Kinda fun—like an adventure takin' the girl belongin' to them stockings what? Will ye' come—with me?"

Rosie stammered something about 8 o'clock. Yes, she would be ready by 8 o'clock. She could say no more for Miss Crawford stood perilously near in the hall beyond. She shut the door politely.

All afternoon Miss Crawford complained about the dust that had blown in while Rosie held open that front door, but Rosie scarcely heard. She had found adventure, an adventure as intriguing to a romantic young mind as the very adventure of ancient Cinderella, only this time, instead of a glass slipper, Prince Charming came with—well—Cinderella's stockings. What did it matter that Miss Crawford fussed—in another hour Rosie would be starting to dress—waiting for her "beau" and all—what did anything matter?

THE BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

THIS is the first time in my life I have ever had enough coconuts," sighed Bobby throwing away a shell of a fine big one, out of which he had just finished eating the firm white meat.

"This is the place to get enough," I laughed. "there's hardly another kind of a tree on the island." We were on a tropical island down in the Pacific off the coast of South America.

"Coconuts and gulls," said Bunny. "That's about all you see around here. For myself, I prefer the North."

"Certainly all kinds of gulls," I agreed. "I never knew there were so many different kinds."

"And have you noticed, asked Bobby, "that we see most of them toward evening? They don't seem to stay at home during the daytime at all. I wonder where they go?"

"Go fishing, of course," said Bunny." That is their business."

"That wouldn't be a bad profession, chuckled Bobby. "I shouldn't think it would be work just to go out and fish all day. I think I would like it."

"We were quiet for a while and then Bobby started talking again. "There's one bird on this island that doesn't go fishing every day,' he declared.

"Yes," replied the boy. "He just sits up in that tree all day."

"Not all day," said Bunny. "You just watch him this evening when the others are coming home."

That was enough for Bobby. About 4 o'clock he took up his position near the tree where the big bird sat and watched him.

Soon across the still surface of the water came the gulls on their way home. How pretty they looked with the sun shining on their glistening feathers.

Then up out of the tree flew this big bird—a frigate bird, that's what he was. He stretched his wings and then he soared on calmly. But when he got near the gulls he commenced scolding. Such a racket he did make. You could see the other gulls were frightened to death.

I quickly got out my binoculars to watch what was going on and I simply gasped with surprise at what I saw through my glass.

That frigate bird flew right up to the smaller gulls and went at them with such fury that the gulls just dropped the fish which they had caught right out of their mouths. And one gull which refused to give up was seized by the tail and shaken until he dropped his fish. Then the frigate bird calmly ate it up.

"Well, I never!" I said.

"Just think of a hard day's fishing and then have the fish stolen from you," exclaimed Bobby when he saw what happened.

"When you're hungry, too," added Bunny.

It would have served conveniently for this morning's lead, as it was timely and logical. And could have been strung out.

BOSTON RADIO AMERICAN

VOICING THE GREAT AMERICAN DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

SAMUEL CURTIS, JR., Radio Editor

'TEX RICKARD' OF RADIO

Broadcasting has been responsible for developing many persons who never might become almost nationally known, but none perhaps are striking than Peter J. Levins, aided by local broadcasting, the "Tex Rickard of Radio." While Levins is not an artist, entertainer or announcer, his ability of presenting musical appearance of radio artists is placed him in a class by himself. A native of Cambridge, Levins started promoting concert artists, was successful and others not so fortunate. He had the usual number of disappointments and then, finding that radio artists gave an unusual opportunity, he opened this new field. His first successful attempt in the field of exploiting his talent was with the Silvertown Cord Orchestra at Symphony Hall, soon.

When he proposed his idea to New York promoters they smiled and told him crazy to think of putting popular dance orchestra in Symphony Hall for a concert program. During Graham McNamee and "Silver Masked Tenor," through with his original plan, however, and packed that concert hall with a capacity crowd of 3000 doors.

The big New York promoters and their fluke and Pete got a lucky break.

His next surprise came to Providence, where he paid a prohibitive Sunday prices for the organization and a the this second event was in the almost positive ruin, as the Silvertown Cord Orchestra had left him in that city staged by a group of the American Legion nerve, but Levins had and faith, and again an able critics by causing the police to assign half a men to keep the lines from traffic in front of the the Levins who, on Tuesday ected the First Radio Symphony Hall. It was promoters that at least "picked a bloomer"; but turned the trick, and a well known artists and that have become popular air, filled Symphony Hall capacity, thereby proving that radio has developed artists.

THIRD GEBHARD CONCERT

Chief among the attractions from WBZ this evening will be the concert presented under the direction of Heinrich Gebhard and Frank S. Moore, which will be broadcast at 8:15 o'clock. In this concert, the third of a series being presented by these two recognized artists, distinguished musicians will take part. The program consisting of both vocal and instrumental selections has been carefully arranged and is flavored with a variety that is always pleasing to the radio audience. Another of the interesting features of the concert will be the explanation and description of the selections by W. Gordon Swan, WBZ announcer.

The regular Saturday evening concert of the Repertory Theatre Orchestra under the direction of Daniel Kuntz will also take its turn during the WBZ program at 7:45. The high light of this broadcast will be playing of a suite by E. Aldrich Dolson entitled "Indian Songs." It has been said that the musical Mimic of a given race always brings with it something very different. The titles of these songs in themselves are enticing: "Shower Moon," "Legend of the Waterfall," "The West Wind and the Night," Marriage Song," "Song of Victory," Pale Moonlight," and "Retrospection." In each number a truly beautiful legend is told in music.

Radio Queries

Q. G. G. Roslindale. Can you tell me where I can procure one of the 7½ volt C batteries such as are used in the Zenith 4R receiver?

A. Try the Gen. El. Johns Company, 69 High street, Boston, Boston distributors for this machine.

Q. D. S. N. Marblehead. How can I tell when the C battery needs renewing in a Radiola superheterodyne?

The best way is to measure it with a voltmeter. When it gets below 4 volts, s'ip in a new one. If you have the Gen. El. Johns Company go by the symptoms displayed, you probably notice a bubbling sound, with periodical interruptions in the loudspeaker output. This becomes more noticeable as the volume is increased.

Once More a Good Chance for Our Sons

By O. P. Williams

Training the Youth

Citizens' Camps Teach Right Living

This year there are to be fifty-two Citizens' Military Training Camps, with accommodation for 35,000 young men, each receiving free, as Uncle Sam's guest, a month of fine vacation.

The adjective "military" in the title of these camps has been over-emphasized. No lad eligible in age, physical condition and character will be "militarized" by his experiences in one of these camps. What these camps provide is an excellent course in training with the Colors for national citizenship.

He will get valuable physical training. He will learn in a democratic manner how to work and play with his fellows under supervision and on schedule. He will learn punctuality, obedience, right care of his body, how to be orderly, self-reliant and efficient in outdoor life. He will be strengthened in all the essentials of good citizenship.

But instead of any of this being irksome, it will all be so handled as to constitute a lot of good, clean, wholesome fun. More than half of the hours not passed in restful sleep will be occupied with healthful and enjoyable recreation.

Of course, no apology is necessary for the activities which may technically be called military.

All the activities have military value because nothing that makes for competence in citizenship is lost in the emergency of war.

Vigor of body, ability to act intelligently with others, toeing the mark at duty's call, understanding of the citizen's responsibilities, all are equally valuable in peace or war.

True, facility in squad drill, expertness in marksmanship and other aptitudes in the technique of war have little call in the vocations of peace, but are prudent bits of reserve knowledge against a time of need.

The citizen owes this preparedness to his country. It is to his advantage to be able to discharge the debt in so pleasant a place as a Summer camp instead of having to rush wholly unready into the improvised camps of war.

Fathers, if you have sons between the ages of seventeen and twenty-four who are sound, clean, sane and are wondering where to go for a vacation this Summer, tell them about Camp Devens.

Let them know that the Government pays all expenses, including transportation, from home to camp and return, good food, uniforms, bedding and medical care.

Send to the C. M. T. C. officer, First Corps Area, Army Base, Boston, Massachusetts, for full particulars, including dates when the camps are open and application blanks.

Your boys will not only have the time of their lives, but you, as a parent, will be immensely pleased with the effects upon them.

Already more than a quarter of the enlistments are in. Better act promptly.

Worrying About Kings

No Need of It

Paris is said to worry about two royal pretenders. One of them, the Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia, thinks he is going to succeed the late Czar.

Another, the Duke of Guise, thinks he is entitled to the throne of France. A newspaper that he subsidized prints "Long Live the King" on its front page.

The French Republic will send the Guise pretender Duke into exile, and the French Socialists want to exile the humorous Russian would-be Czar.

No accident of birth, Russian or French, will sit on a French or Russian throne.

A man of the Mussolini type might seize power in Russia. Such an event in France is most improbable. Nothing to fear from so-called "royalty" in either case. Men now choose their leaders, or the leaders choose themselves. Accidents of birth are less popular—whether a strong Kaiser or a weak Czar.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I WAS about 760 degrees patriotic during the war.

My pride in this statement is not unmixed with shame. For in the name of that patriotism I did, said and thought things which would have been scorned by some of our better Hottentots.

However, there was one stunt pulled off during the war which gave even me pause. The incident concerned a mother and her son. The boy was very young and badly frightened. He had been drafted and had gone to his camp in high spirits. But once there, homesickness and terror overwhelmed him and he did the thing which a frightened child will nearly always do—he ran away to his mother.

For some days he hid in the home while the 109 per cent. mama railed at him and commanded him to return to the army and face the consequences. I do not know what the actual consequences of such desertion in time of war would have been, but the inference was that the boy would be shot for desertion. The boy would not go. So the mother called in the authorities and gave her son up.

I do not know whether this story was true, but I do know that it swept the country and brought about overwhelming applause.

I didn't applaud it. I thought what I would have done if a certain sensitive, gentle boy whom I loved should turn panic-stricken at the horror of war and seek refuge in my arms. I thought of the fierce fighting love in mothers which, since time immemorial, has made them face death and sacrifice that their children might live.

Reasonable Act

And suddenly my 760 degree patriotism did a flop! For besides the call of mother love, the snarl of fighting nations seemed a trivial and bestial thing.

I am aware that many will disagree violently with this stand, Mrs. Mary Bailey, of Houston, Texas, would most certainly disagree.

Mrs. Bailey gave her son, John, seventeen, into the custody of the law on February 25, even though he faces trial on a charge for which the extreme penalty is death—criminal assault.

Already I can hear an approving chorus: "If there were more mothers like that we wouldn't have this juvenile problem of today," cry those Spartan souls.

You said it, my hearties!

If we had more mothers like that there wouldn't be any juvenile problem today. For there wouldn't be any juveniles.

Wasn't it a reasonable act? Didn't it show a fine feeling for law and order on the part of the mother?

Yes, it was reasonable. And it showed a fine feeling for the law and order on the part of the mother. Nevertheless, I protest that if motherhood were universally so reasonable and law abiding, it would cease.

For nobody who was so chock full of reason and law and order would want to become a mother.

Women do not have babies because it's a reasonable thing to do.

They do not have babies because it's a civic duty.

They have babies because having babies is the fiercest, deepest, most unreasonable hunger of the human heart. And having had the baby, they will move heaven and earth to protect that child. If you consider this a moment, you will see that this must be so.

A Great Big Job

Motherhood isn't an easy job. It's the hardest job on earth. It runs counter to every selfish instinct of the comfort loving human female.

The woman who bears children and brings them up properly must sacrifice ease and peace of mind, youth and beauty, and take up a crucifixion of love which will last throughout her life. She must be prepared to go through dark, bitter travail not only once, but every hour of her child's existence, that from her own strength the child's strength may be built.

Do you think that any slight nudge from Mama Nature will star her on such an arduous course? Hardly!

And so it is that there is no devotion like the devotion of mothers and no selfishness like the selfishness of mothers. Nothing in all the world is as beautiful to a real mother as her own child. No program is as important as the actual physical life of her child and her child's safety.

That's why the average mother would rather be shredded to bits than give up her child to the avenging grip of the law. It isn't because she's a stupid sentimentalist. It's because nature has made of her a specialized machine for the bearing and protection of young human life, and nothing on earth can take precedence over her job.

IF OF AVERAGE ABILITY BE VERY CAUTIOUS

You are a many-sided person.

You have dabbled in this and that and become fairly proficient in a good many things.

At present you are holding a good position and it does not bring in as much money as you would like. You think you might make more elsewhere.

Some of your friends suggest an entire change of occupation.

They advise you to go into a business in which you have never engaged, saying that "there is a pile of money in it."

You are known to be able to adapt yourself to most any situation.

But some way with all your changes you have never gotten rich. That "pile of money" sounds alluring.

But take a word of advice.

If you can't get a top salary in any undertaking so far you need not expect to be the one to skim the cream from the "pile of money" job.

It takes a certain amount of acumen, shrewdness, stick-to-itiveness which you have not shown up to the present time.

STEAMER HELPS TO SETTLE TROUBLES

By DR. FRANK CRANE

AFTER a long and stormy disagreement involving some court procedure, the Stillmans, James and Fifi, got on the boat together and went to Europe with the hope of making up their differences.

Whatever may be said about Stillman or Mrs. Stillman and their respective culpabilities, their adventure in getting together on a boat with the hope of settling their differences is to be commended.

Things look different to you when you are on a steamer out in the middle of the ocean from the way they look anywhere else. You are in the midst of an infinity of water. Around you is nothing but the sky and the ocean. Beneath you and between you and death there is but a narrow hull. It is impossible to look at the problems of life the same way you look at them when you are at home.

You are cut off from letters and newspapers, and best of all, from intimate friends. You are alone.

If most married couples that have difficulties would get off by themselves alone, they would find some way to straighten them out, as the greater part of their trouble comes from other people.

These other people may be very well meaning and may have their "good at heart," but there is hardly any question that cannot be solved more easily if the two parties are alone than if they have assistance. The best place for two people who have assumed the marriage relation is by themselves. Most difficulties come from the presence of third parties.

If we could get all the couples who are threatened with divorce off by themselves and let them fight it out without any outside interference there would be hardly a quarrel that could not be arranged.

'You Said It, Marceline!'

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "LOVE AND LOGIC"

There is NO LOGIC
IN LOVE, and there is
No logic in a WOMAN
WHO LOVES!
How can there be?
TRUE LOVE is not an ARGUMENT, or even
A debate; it is
A CONCESSION.
NO man can QUARREL
A woman into LOVING
Him, but he MAY
Quarrel her OUT OF IT.
A WOMAN CANNOT ARGUE
With a man and get
AFFECTION, but
She MAY get a COLD
RESPONSE.
When LOVE ARRIVES
On the scene he is
ALWAYS treated to a WARM
WELCOME, yet he is SELDOM allowed to LEAVE
WITHOUT REPROACH.
Love is a QUEER
CUSTOMER; if
You always TREAT HIM
As a VISITOR he may STAY
PERMANENTLY, but
TAKE HIM FOR GRANTED
And he will EVENTUALLY GO
Elsewhere.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Poetry is the first and last of all knowledge—it is as immortal as the heart of man.

* * *

Set it down to yourself as well to create good precedents as to follow them.

* * *

The present is the living sum-total of the whole past.

Defer not till tomorrow to be wise, Tomorrow's sun to thee may never rise.
—Congreve.

The poet beholds the future in the present, and his thoughts are the germs of the flower and the fruit of later time.

* * *

Even the best proverb can be misapplied. Its wisdom lies in the ear of the hearer.

* * *

Courage consists in equality to the problem before us.

* * *

In all our lamentations and regrets pleasures have been mixed up with pains.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

JUST an hour hastens by on such speedy wings, seems but little use to try starting worthwhile things. Sixty little minutes pass at a lively pace, swift as winds across the grass in their breathless race. Just an hour, so dream and drift in a world of dreams happy, as gay fancies shift, not to be, but seem. Always looking off afar to some distant time, when, as in another star, we shall toil and climb. Just an hour, but see aright how it strangely falls that the heaped-up hours' height fills time's endless halls. Just an hour may decide all your future years; just an hour's hasting tide may bring smiles or tears. Just an hour to Earth may give some immortal thing, word or deed that still shall live while the suns wing.

EARTH'S 'FLATNESS' IS DISCUSSED

By Garrett P. Serviss,
Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

THE earth is flattened. But let no "astatic philosopher" rejoice in expectation of reading an announcement that he has always been right and the other philosophers always wrong about the shape of the earth. The earth is not flat "like a plane," as he thinks, but only flattened at the poles."

This fact, to be sure, has long been known, but it is still the subject of very intense investigation by those curious persons of much special learning who concern themselves with the abstruse branch of science known as geodesy. They will never be fully satisfied until they know to the last inch how much difference there is between the diameter of the earth, measured from pole to pole, and its diameter measured through from one side of the equator to the other.

Most persons are quite content with the statement that the earth's diameter is 1-297th shorter through the poles than the other way; that is to say, those who visit either pole are 12.35 miles nearer the center of the globe than those who stand on the equator. But the insatiable earth-measurers scorn such round figures. Literally they beseech both earth and heaven to tell them just what the flattening amounts to. They would like to get it in centimeters or even in millimeters.

You would hardly believe, so overpowering is their desire after this singular bit of refined knowledge, that they demand of the moon that she help them obtain it! For though you may not be aware of any effects from the flattening of the earth around its poles, the earth's attentive and obedient satellite, the "silver moon," is perfectly aware of such effects, and betrays her consciousness by her conduct.

There are little hitches in her celestial walk resulting from the slight deformity of the earth, and so infinitely delicate is the sympathetic relationship of this mother and her child that astronomers can detect them and by reasoning backward from effect to cause can calculate how much deformity of the earth is required to produce the observed unsteadiness of the moon's gait—which, to be sure, is so slight that only astronomers would ever guess that it existed.

The moon's answer to the inquiry of these inquisitive persons on the earth, who drop everything, almost, in their eagerness to find out the precise shape of their home planet, would be more prompt and specific but for the interference of the sun. He, huge disturber and master, seems to find pleasure in making the fascinating moon practice dancing steps of his style, and so the astronomer-geodesist has the difficult task of eliminating the effects of these solar impertinences from his calculations.

And to complete the perplexity, the moon herself, owing to some little imperfections of her own figure, fails to follow with absolute exactness the curves that she would otherwise describe, and thus new uncertainty is introduced and more and more skilful figuring is called for.

But this "lunar method" of investigating the figure of the earth is only one among many that are employed, and the details of all of them are gone over again and again, with such pains, such scrupulous devotion, such unwearying industry, that the casual onlooker would suppose that there was a big fortune at stake—and so there is, but not the kind of fortune that most people think of when they hear that word. There is no "money in it." It is only what you read of once in a while—probably without a thrill—knowledge pursued for absolutely its own sake alone.

But what a sight it must be for the overlooking powers! They, if anybody, may find a thrill in it. If they do not admire that, then what do they admire when they look down here? It would not be pleasant to think that they find nothing to admire; still less pleasant to think that they are jealous of little man's hardly won advance in pure knowledge.

Some of the recent refinements in geodetical measurement make the polar flattening 1-294th, instead of 1-297th. Do you care which is nearer the truth? I hope you do.

Famous Fortunes

By BARBARA BAYNE

ONE of the big figures in American industrial history was Samuel Pomeroy Colt, the founder of the fortune based upon the manufacture of firearms. He was born January 19, 1853, the son of Christopher Colt and the nephew of Samuel Colt, for whom he was named, who perfected the first revolving pistol and in 1855, founded the Colt Patent Fire Arms Manufacturing Co. of Hartford, Ct.

Building on an inheritance of great wealth, Colonel Colt amassed millions. He took up his residence in Rhode Island, and in 1887, founded the Industrial Trust Co., the largest bank in Rhode Island.

The first reorganization of the National India Rubber Co. occurred in 1888, and its final reorganization, under the name of the United States Rubber Co., came in 1901. From time to time the United States Rubber Co. acquired or formed subsidiary companies, engaged in the manufacture of rubber footwear, mechanical goods, tires and various supplies needed in the manufacture of rubber goods.

The total assets of the United States Rubber Corporation are estimated at $316,811,021. Samuel P. Colt remained the president of both this company and the Industrial Trust Co. until his death at "Linden Place," his home at Bristol, Rhode Island, August 31, 1921.

Colonel Colt graduated from the Columbia Law School in 1876, and followed the legal profession for several years. From a member of Governor Lippitt's staff, with the rank of Colonel, he became aide to the Governor, then in turn a member of the Rhode Island General Assembly, a member of the Legislature, Attorney-General, then Governor of Rhode Island.

But his remarkable genius for business compelled him to forsake a political career to engage in constructive work on a large scale in banking and industry. He married in 1851. Three children were born of the union, one of whom is Russell C. Colt, the divorced husband of Ethel Barrymore.

Colonel Colt was a man of kindly sympathy and a genial, charming manner. And he was one of the highest type of America's industrial titans.
